'Have not' nations rap 'haves'

PARIS (UPI) — The underdeveloped countries represented at the "so-called North-South dialogue said today the industrial countries would be responsible for any postponement of next month's cabinet level conference.

The industrial countries feel the time is not ripe for such a conference, sources close to the dialogue said, but were unwilling to take the blame for putting it off.

Postponement could theoretically affect whether world oil prices are to go up, and if so by how much.

Amtrak derailment injures 30

DOVERSBURG, Tenn. (UPI) — An Amtrak passenger train, the Panama Limited en route from Chicago to New Orleans with 250 Thanksgiving passengers, derailed near here before dawn today, sending 30 persons to a hospital.

Police said they were holding an unidentified motorist who apparently struck the railroad track and knocked it out of line just before the accident.

The train's engineer, who was unidentified, said he saw a "kink" in the track just before he reached the Sylvania railroad crossing, but was unable to slow the train in time.

There were no fatalities and no serious injuries even though three of the cars were tipped onto their sides and the entire train — 11 passenger cars, three locomotives and a steam car — was thrown off the track.

Rhodesia sets rule timetable

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Rhodesia announced today a 23-month timetable for majority rule that flew in the face of black nationalist demands for a transfer of power on Dec. 1, 1977.

George Smith, Rhodesia's director of legal drafting, proposed an eight-point timetable for the transition and said black demands for majority rule within one year were unrealistic.

"Demands to reduce the period of transfer could jeopardize the chances of many Rhodesian blacks having an opportunity to cast their vote for the future of the country as they would like to see it," Smith said.

US emissary seeks Beirut meet

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Charge d'Affaires George Lane today sought a meeting with President Elias Sarkis to help avert a threatened crisis along Lebanon's troubled border with Israel.

U.S. diplomats would only characterize Lane's planned meeting with the president as "normal diplomatic contacts."

Parades, dinners top nation's menu

By United Press International

Mickey Mouse, Snoopy and Howdy Doody bob up and down Broadway, Santa Claus makes his first appearance of the year, and millions of Americans celebrate Thanksgiving with traditional turkey dinners and televised football.

Parades kick off the Thanksgiving Day celebration in most of the nation's major cities, many of them highlighted by the introduction of

New lawyers for Gilmore

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A pale and gaunt Gary Gilmore, condemned to die but unable to persuade authorities to go ahead with his execution, was in the seventh day of his Death Row hunger strike on Thanksgiving Day.

His battle to cut the legal red tape and go for a living squab took another turn with disclosure that Gilmore's uncle has arranged for the double slayer to have two new attorneys — the sixth and seventh men to represent him in recent weeks. One was to defend Gilmore's right to die before a Utah State Prison firing squad and the other to draw up his will and sell the rights to his memoirs.

Gilmore went on the hunger strike last Friday. The prison today was serving steak and eggs for breakfast and a traditional dinner of turkey and the trimmings.

"He's another day older and another day hungrier," said Warden Sam Smith when asked the condition of Gilmore, 35, late Wednesday. He said Gilmore has been ingesting only coffee with sugar.

Ronald Stanger, a former Utah County prosecutor from Provo, met for the first time with Gilmore and agreed to handle the criminal aspects of the case.

"I will protect his rights at every stage of the case," Stanger said.

The Utah Board of Pardons will hold a special hearing next Tuesday to decide whether Gilmore's death penalty should be commuted to life imprisonment. The admitted slayer of two young Provo men last summer has vowed to personally appear before the board and give it "good reason to kill me."

A second Provo lawyer, Robert L. Moody, was hired to handle Gilmore's business affairs, including dealing with movie and book firms offering to buy the rights to his life story and drawing up a will.

"He wants to make sure his mother is taken care of," said Mrs. Vern Damico, the condemned man's aunt. Her husband hired the attorneys, who replaced Dennis Boaz, a writer and lawyer fired Tuesday.

Family members throughout the country got together for the four-day holiday weekend and gave thanks by feasting on the traditional Thanksgiving dinner of turkey, stuffing, cranberries and pumpkin pie.

The original celebration was held in 1621 in Plymouth, Mass., the year after the Pilgrims from England landed and saw many of their family members and friends starve because of a harsh winter. Indians saved the settlers by providing them with a feast, which lasted for three days.

Local residents of Plymouth, a sleepy coastal town, annually dress up in appropriate costumes and re-enact the 50 Pilgrims who survived the first winter. They march to a local church in a re-enactment of the original Pilgrims' march of Thanksgiving and prayer.

Free turkey dinners for the needy were planned by charitable organizations throughout the nation. In New York City, the Volunteers of America planned to serve 2,000 turkey dinners to the needy of the Bowery Tabernacle and the Salvation Army expected 2,300 homeless guests and senior citizens at its "feeding program" in several locations in the city.

The Chicago Mercantile Exchange, which deals in futures trading in frozen turkeys, gave 200 of the big birds for distribution to needy persons in and near Chicago.

Idaho Amtrak 6 months off

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Amtrak officials now tentatively say a rail route through Idaho could begin in May or June next year, according to Sen. Frank Church.

"Amtrak is presently analyzing facility needs, scheduling and potential marketing approaches," Church said after meeting with Amtrak officials recently. "We will know early in 1977 exactly when the schedule will be and when service will begin."

Preliminary schedules, released in August, showed an Amtrak train would depart Seattle in the early morning, arrive in Portland about noon, arrive in Boise about midnight, in Shoshone about 2 a.m. and reach Salt Lake City about 7 a.m.

Criticism of the scheduling erupted almost immediately after it was announced.

"It would appear that with this scheduling they (Amtrak officials) have succumbed to the pressure for a train, but made it come through Idaho when people would normally not be wanting to board a train," Gov. Cecil Andrus said earlier.

A Church official said Wednesday Amtrak is delaying an announcement of final schedules until scheduling problems of Chicago-Salt Lake City and San Francisco-Salt Lake City routes are worked out.

Rescheduling of other Amtrak routes could mean a train will be coming through Idaho later in the morning, the official said. However, "it would still be at an inconvenient time probably," he said.

The problem is making the route pay for itself, and scheduling it so it hits larger cities at more convenient times means more customers, the official added.

Odds are the new route will not pay for itself. Amtrak earlier estimated during the first year of operation the train will cost about $5.2 million to operate and earn only $2.5 million, leaving a $2.6 million loss to be met by federal subsidies.

These figures are based on a predicted average of 129 passengers per trip or about 87,000 passengers, carried the first year, an Amtrak official said earlier.

The rail route, a two-year experiment, would also include stops at Hagerman, The Dalles, Pendleton, La Grande, Baker and Ontario, all Oregon; Brigham City and Ogden, both Utah, and Nampa, Mountain Home and Pocatello.

Several new facilities must be built along the new route to handle passenger service but this construction, primarily concrete slabs for passengers to stand on at stations, is not expected to add a delay, the Church official said.

"I think it would be among Amtrak's fastest," Church said. "The train is projected to average almost 80 miles per hour. This service is a long time in coming, and I hope the people of Idaho will make good use of it."

Prisoner swap accord signed

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — In a precedential setting in U.S.-Mexican relations, the two countries today sign a prisoner exchange treaty repatriating hundreds of U.S. citizens accused of drug offenses.

As many as 1,200 Mexican citizens in American jails also will be sent to their homeland as result of the agreement.

U.S. Ambassador Joseph John Jaya was to meet with Mexican Foreign Minister Alfonso Garcia Robles at the Foreign Ministry in Tlatelolco to sign the historic document this afternoon.

Ozone levels top limits in many sections of US

© Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Commerce Department officials have confirmed what many environmentalists suspected — that concentrations of smog-producing ozone exceed the national pollution standard in most cities and even some rural areas.

The scientists came up with a few surprises. They discovered unusually high ozone levels in several cities that border on larger lakes, particularly Milwaukee and New Orleans. And they found sizable concentrations of ozone in remote rural areas, indicating the chemical pollutant is transported through the air from cities located hundreds of miles away.

The ozone research, done by a team of meteorologists at the Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, focused on 32 mid-sized cities east of the Rockies. Pollution data collector from urban monitoring stations showed that in all but six of the cities ozone concentrations were higher than the maximum permissible level for ozone set by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The city showing the highest ozone level was Milwaukee with 12 parts of ozone per million, compared with the EPA standard of eight parts per million (ppm).

Other cities among those sampled having ozone levels above the limit were Dayton, Ohio, at 11.5; Corpus Christi, Tex., Louisville, Ky., Rochester, N.Y., and Toledo, Ohio, at 11 ppm; Columbus, Ohio, at 10.5 ppm; and Indianapolis, Pittsburgh, San Antonio and Houston, 10 ppm.

Cities are required under the Clean Air Act to comply with the EPA ozone standard by mid-1977, but the research findings suggest many cities may need an extension.

The highest ozone levels are found downwind of urban areas with heavy motor vehicle traffic and big industry. Automobile exhaust is believed to account for most of the ozone, which is produced by the interaction of hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides in the presence of sunlight.

Although beneficial in the stratosphere, where it shields the earth from hazardous ultraviolet rays, ozone in high concentrations at ground level damages trees and farm crops and reduces visibility.

Indians seek land return

© N.Y. Times Service

MASHPEE, Mass. — When the Pilgrims sat down to their first Thanksgiving in New England 355 years ago, Massassett, the leader of the Wampanoag Indians, and 90 of his braves sat around them and provided five deer for the feast.

The festival celebrated not only survival through the first harsh winter and the gathering of the harvest, but also the friendship and help of the Indians.

Now the Wampanoags want their land back. The remnants of the tribe have filed a lawsuit in federal district court that has cast doubt on the ownership of all the land in this little Cape Cod town and has brought its booming real estate and second-home development business, its economic lifeline, to a sudden halt.

The lawsuit, based on the Indian Nonintercourse Act of 1700, which ordered that all land dealings with Indian tribes must be approved by Congress, is part of a general stirring of activity by New England's Indian tribes.

In Maine, the Passamaquoddy and Penobscot tribes have filed a claim, under the Nonintercourse Act, to two-thirds of the state that has threatened the ability of towns to raise money through bond issues.

A similar suit has been filed by the Narragansett Indians in Rhode Island, and suits are pending in other states. In Vermont, the Abenaki Indians, who live mostly around Swanton in the far northwest, have asked for unlimited hunting and fishing rights and Gov. Thomas P. Salmon is reportedly preparing to grant them formal tribal status, making them eligible for federal programs.

On Martha's Vineyard, another branch of the Wampanoag tribe has filed a suit for the town's common lands in Gay Head, including the area's famous cliffs, and the residents may vote at a special town meeting to turn them over to the tribe. At stake, they say, are potential federal grants, for the tribe needs a land base before it is eligible for federal Indian programs.

IPUC hearings in Coeur d'Alene

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission announced Tuesday it would hold public hearings Dec. 1-2 in Coeur d'Alene on three applications, including two by Washington Water Power Co. for rate increases.

The first hearing will be on an application by Tracy Hoffman Water Corp. for authority to provide water service as a public utility.

The Tracy Hoffman system was constructed in connection with development of what is known as the Hoffman Addition subdivision in the Coeur d'Alene and presently serves 75 homes.

The firm also requested commission assistance in determining fair and reasonable rates in connection with its application. The company currently charges $3 per month for the first 3,000 gallons or part thereof, plus 33 cents for each additional 1,000 gallons.

Washington Water Power has requested permission to pass through to its customers a 20 per cent or $5,894 increase in the price of natural gas charged by the utility's pipeline suppliers — Northwest Pipeline Corp.

If approved by the IPUC, the proposed increase would add $9.14 to the $44.84 bill a residential customer now pays for 200 therms of natural gas.

Washington Water Power also has applied for a two-step increase in rates to its water service customers in Idaho.

The firm provides water service to approximately 112 customers in three systems located in Kootenai County.

In its application, WWP alleges it requires the $7,000 annual increase in revenue. The company said the increase would cover its operating expenses and interest on its capital financing of the system.

Have not nations rap 'haves'?

PARIS (UPI) — The underdeveloped countries represented at the so-called North-South dialogue said today the industrial countries would be responsible for any postponement of next month's cabinet level conference.

The industrial countries feel the time is not ripe for such a conference, sources close to the dialogue said, but were unwilling to take the blame for putting it off.

Postponement could affect whether world oil prices are to go up, and so by how much.

Amtrak derailment injures 30

DUVERSBURG, Tenn. (UPI) — An Amtrak passenger train, the Panama Limited, en route from Chicago to New Orleans with 259 Thanksgiving passengers, derailed near here before dawn today, sending 30 persons to a hospital.

Police said they were holding an unidentified motorist who apparently struck the railroad track and knocked it out of line just before the accident.

The train's engineer, who was unidentified, said he saw a "kink" in the track just before he reached the Sylvania railroad crossing, but was unable to slow the train in time.

There were no fatalities and no serious injuries even though three of the cars were tipped onto their sides and the entire train — 11 passenger cars, three locomotives and a steam car — was thrown off the track.

Rhodesia sets rule timetable

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Rhodesia announced today a 23-month timetable for majority rule that flew in the face of black nationalist demands for a transfer of power on Dec. 1, 1977.

George Smith, Rhodesia's director of legal drafting, proposed an eight-point timetable for the transition and said black demands for majority rule within one year were unrealistic.

Demands to reduce the period of transfer could jeopardize the chances of many Rhodesian blacks having an opportunity to cast their vote for the future of the country as they would like to see it," Smith said.

US emissary seeks Beirut meet

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Charge d'Affaires George Lane today sought a meeting with President Elias Sarkis to help avert a threatened crisis along Lebanon's troubled border with Israel.

U.S. diplomats would only characterize Lane's planned meeting with the president as "normal diplomatic contacts."

Parades, dinners top nation's menu

By United Press International

"Mickey Mouse, Snoopy and Howdy Doody bob up and down Broadway, Santa Claus makes his first appearance of the year, and millions of Americans celebrate Thanksgiving with traditional turkey dinners and televised football." Parades kick off the Thanksgiving Day celebration in most of the nation's major cities, many of them highlighted by the introduction of the next holiday's star — Santa Claus.

Macys' 50th annual parade in New York City, viewed by millions, features nine giant helium-filled balloons of well-known cartoon characters, including Bullwinkle, Mickey Mouse and Snoopy.

(More on holiday, pp. 23)

Family members throughout the country got together for the four-day holiday weekend and gave thanks by feasting on the traditional Thanksgiving dinner of turkey, stuffing, cranberries and pumpkin pie.

The original celebration was held in 1621 in Plymouth, Mass., the year after the Pilgrims from England landed and saw many of their family members and friends starve because of a harsh winter. Indians saved the settlers by providing them with a feast, which lasted for three days.

Local residents of Plymouth, a sleepy coastal town, annually dress up in appropriate costumes and represent the 50 Pilgrims who survived the first winter. They march to a local church in a re-enactment of the original "pilgrimage" march of Thanksgiving and prayer.

Free turkey dinners for the needy were planned by charitable organizations throughout the nation. In New York City, the Volunteers of America planned to serve 2,000 turkey dinners to the needy at the Bowery Tabernacle and the Salvation Army expected 2,000 homeless guests and senior citizens at its "feeding program" in several locations in the city.

The Chicago Mercantile Exchange, which deals in futures trading in frozen turkeys, gave 200 of the big birds for distribution to needy persons in and near Chicago.

New lawyers for Gilmore

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A pale and gaunt Gary Gilmore, condemned to die but unable to persuade authorities to go ahead with his execution, was in the seventh day of his Death Row hunger strike on Thanksgiving Day.

His battle to cut the legal red tape and go before a firing squad took another turn with disclosure that Gilmore's uncle has arranged for the double slayer to have two new attorneys — the sixth and seventh men to represent him in recent weeks. One was to defend Gilmore's right to die before a Utah State Prison firing squad and the other to draw up his will and sell the rights to his memoirs.

Gilmore — went on the — hunger — strike — last Friday. The prison today was serving steak and eggs for breakfast and a traditional dinner of turkey and the trimmings.

"He's another day older and another day hungrier," said Warden Sam Smith when asked the condition of Gilmore, 35, late Wednesday. He said Gilmore has been ingesting only coffee with sugar.

Ronald Stanger, a former Utah County prosecutor from Provo, met for the first time with Gilmore and agreed to handle the criminal aspects of the case.

"I will protect his rights at every stage of the case," Stanger said.

The Utah Board of Pardons will hold a special hearing next Tuesday to decide whether Gilmore's death penalty should be commuted to life imprisonment. The admitted slayer of two young Provo men last summer has vowed to personally appear before the board and "give it a good reason to kill me."

A second Provo lawyer, Robert L. Moody, was hired to handle Gilmore's business affairs, including dealing with movie and book firms offering to buy the rights to his life story and drawing up a will.

"He wants to make sure his mother is taken care of," said Mrs. Vern Damico, the condemned man's aunt. Her husband hired the attorneys, who replaced Dennis Boaz, a writer and lawyer freed Tuesday.

MASHPEE, Mass. — When the Pilgrims sat down to their first Thanksgiving in New England 350 years ago, Massachusetts' first leader of the Wampanoag Indians, and 90 of his braves sat around the fire and provided five deer for the feast.

The festival celebrated not only survival through the first harsh winter and the gathering of the harvest, but also the friendship and help of the Indians.

Now the Wampanoags want their land back. The remnants of the tribe have filed a lawsuit in federal district court that has cast doubt on the ownership of all the land in this little Cape Cod town and has brought its booming real estate and second-home development business, its economic lifeline, to a sudden halt.

The lawsuit, based on the Indian Nonintercourse Act of 1790, which ordered that all land dealings with Indian tribes must be approved by Congress, is part of a general stirring of activity by New England's Indian tribes.

In Maine, the Passamaquoddy and Penobscot tribes have filed a claim under the Nonintercourse Act, to two-thirds of the state that has threatened the ability of towns to raise money through bond issues.

A similar suit has been filed by the Narragansett Indians in Rhode Island, and suits

Idaho Amtrak 6 months off

By BORZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Amtrak officials now tentatively say a rail route through Idaho could begin in May or June next year, according to Sen. Frank Church.

"Amtrak is presently analyzing facility needs, scheduling and potential marketing approaches," Church said after meeting with Amtrak officials recently. "We will know early in 1977 exactly what the schedule will be and when service will begin."

Preliminary schedules, released in August, showed an Amtrak train would depart Seattle in the early morning, arrive in Portland about noon, arrive in Boise about midnight, in Shoshone about 2 a.m. and reach Salt Lake City about 7 a.m.

Criticism of the scheduling erupted almost immediately after it was announced.

"It would appear that with this scheduling they [Amtrak officials] have succumbed to the pressure for a train, but made it come through Idaho when people would normally not be wanting to board a train," Gov. Cecil Andrus said earlier.

A church official said Wednesday Amtrak is delaying an announcement of final schedules until scheduling problems of Chicago-Salt Lake City and San Francisco-Salt Lake City routes are worked out.

Rescheduling of other Amtrak routes could mean a train will be coming through Idaho later in the morning, the official said. However, "it would still be at an inconvenient time probably."

The problem is making the route pay for itself, and scheduling it so it hits larger cities at more convenient times means more customers, the official added.

Odds are the new route will not pay for itself, Amtrak earlier estimated during the first year of operation the train will cost about $3.2 million to operate and earn only $2.6 million, leaving a $2.6 million loss to be met by federal subsidies.

These figures are based on a predicted average of 120 passengers per trip or about 87,000 passengers carried the first year, an Amtrak official said earlier.

The rail route, a two-year experiment, would also include stops at Hood River, The Dalles, Pendleton, La Grande, Baker and Ontario, all Oregon; Brigham City and Ogden, both Utah; and Nampa, Mountain Home and Pocatello.

Several new facilities must be built along the new route to handle passenger service but this construction, primarily concrete slabs for passengers to stand on at stations, is not expected to add a delay, the Amtrak official said.

"The new route will be among Amtrak's fastest," Church said. "The train is projected to average almost 80 miles per hour. This new service is a long time in coming, and I know the people of Idaho will make good use of it."

TF crimes down during '76 period

TWIN FALLS — The number of major crimes committed in the City of Twin Falls during the first nine months of the year dropped 5.8 per cent from the number of crimes reported during the same period last year.

These drops represent the largest decline in crime in the nine largest Idaho cities.

Uniform Crime Report statistics released this week show the number of major offenses in Boise during the first nine months of this year is up 4.2 per cent from the number of offenses reported last year. Officer percentage increases include Caldwell, 2.5; Coeur D'Alene, 1.4; Idaho Falls, 3.5; Lewiston, 5.3; Moscow, 1.3, and Nampa, 8.9.

Besides Twin Falls, only Pocatello's rate has decreased down 1.9 per cent.

Twin Falls Police Chief Frank Barnett said he can give no reason why the rate here is down while the rate in most cities is up.

In Twin Falls, the number of offenses has dropped from 997 last year to 939 this year. Specifically, Twin Falls police report 401 burglaries, 366 larcenies, 102 aggravated assaults, 62 thefts and five robberies this year compared to 378 burglaries, 473 larcenies, 74 aggravated assaults, 59 auto thefts, 11 robberies and two rapes last year.

Barnett said the drop in burglaries may be a result of police talks to citizen groups on burglary prevention. Because persons are more aware burglaries are occurring, they are better able to prevent burglaries from happening, the police chief said.

Barnett said the rise in aggravated assaults is "something that has been occurring for years." He said more aggravated assaults are occurring in lower age groups. This may be attributable to the greater availability of alcohol, he said.

Prisoner swap accord signed

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — In a precedent-setting event in U.S.-Mexican relations, the countries today sign a prisoner exchange treaty.

Under the treaty, Mexico will release 100 Americans accused of drug offenses.

As many as 1,200 Mexican citizens in American jails also will be sent to their homeland as result of the agreement.

U.S. Ambassador Joseph John Jova was to meet with Mexican Foreign Minister Alfonso Garcia Rebles at the Foreign Ministry in Tlatelolco, to sign the historic document this afternoon.

Ozone levels top limits in many sections of US

© Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Commerce Department scientists have confirmed what many environmentalists have suspected — that concentrations of smog-producing ozone exceed the national pollution standard in most cities and even some rural areas.

The scientists came up with a few surprises. They discovered unusually high ozone levels in several cities that border on large lakes, particularly Milwaukee and New Orleans. And they found sizable concentrations of ozone in remote rural areas, indicating the chemical pollution is transported through the air from cities located thousands of miles away.

The ozone research, done by a team of meteorologists at the commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, focused on 33 mid-size cities east of the Rockies. Pollution data collector from urban monitoring stations showed that in all but six of the cities ozone concentrations were higher than the maximum permissible level for ozone set by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Pollution data collector from urban monitoring stations showed that in all but six of the cities ozone concentrations were higher than the maximum permissible level for ozone set by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The highest ozone levels are found downwind of urban areas with heavy motor vehicle traffic and big industry. Automobile exhaust is believed to account for most of the ozone, which is produced by the interaction of hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides in the presence of sunlight.

Although beneficial in the stratosphere, where it shields the earth from hazardous ultraviolet rays, ozone in high concentrations at ground level damages trees and farm crops and reduces visibility.

are pending in other states. In Vermont, the Abnaki Indians, who live mostly around Swanton in the far northwest, have asked for unlimited hunting and fishing rights and Gov.

Thomas P. Salmon is reportedly preparing to grant them formal tribal status, making them eligible for federal grants.

On Martha's Vineyard, another branch of the Wampanoag tribe has filed a suit for the town common lands in Gay Head, including the area's famous cliffs and the residents' vote at a special town meeting to turn over the land to the tribe. At stake here, too, are potential federal grants, for the tribe needs a land base to be eligible for federal Indian programs.

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The man who became known as D.B. Cooper hijacked an airplane five years ago and parachuted with a satchel containing $200,000.

He was indicted late Wednesday within hours before the statute of limitations may have expired.

The Nov. 24, 1971, incident has been the only successful air piracy for ransom in the United States.

FBI agents on Wednesday were examining a pair of trousers the hijacker, whose identity is not definitely known, may have left atop a towering tree in southwestern Washington. He is believed to have landed in a tree when he jumped.

D.B. Cooper was indicted on Thanksgiving eve by a federal grand jury on charges of air piracy and interfering with commerce by extortion.

The indictment cautiously listed the culprit as "John Doe, also known as Dan Cooper," because he used the name Dan Cooper when he went aboard the Northwest Airlines 727 at Portland International Airport in 1971.

Cooper commanded the plane and at Seattle demanded and received $200,000 in $20 bills and three parachutes. During the plane's flight to Reno he parachuted into the darkness.

No trace of Cooper or the money has been found — unless a pair of pants being scrutinized by FBI laboratories turns out to belong to him.

The checked blue gray pants recently were found hanging in a tree 25 feet from the ground by a hunter in the Lake Merwin area of south western Washington. FBI agents have long believed Cooper drowned in Lake Merwin or perished in the thick cover of blackberry bushes in the wilderness.

On Wednesday seven FBI agents went to the area where the pants were found, but the search was called off after 3½ hours.

Sidney Lezak, the U.S. attorney for Oregon, has maintained that the statute of limitations would not apply to Cooper because he is listed as a fugitive. However, sources in Washington indicated the Justice Department pushed for an indictment as a precaution in case the courts should rule no prosecution could be brought after five years. Legal experts disagree on the limitations statute.

Merc opening Friday

TWIN FALLS — The Merc will open its 19th store in three western states Friday noon in the Blue Lakes Shopping Center in Twin Falls.

The store, which carries wearing apparel, household goods and fabric, is located in the former Tempo Store which closed last April. The company, which was incorporated in 1949, has other stores in Burley, Buhl and Halleys, according to Roger Eeleen, Boise, operations manager who is here for the opening.

Robert Rankin, former manager of the Buhl Merc, will manage the new Twin Falls outlet, with Ted Hutchinson as assistant manager.

Rankin managed the Payette store prior to eight years in Buhl, and also was assistant manager in Payette.

The new Buhl manager is Dave Sharpe, who comes from the Ontario, Ore., store.

Hutchinson comes to the Twin Falls store from The Merc in Blackfoot. Prior to that he worked in the Burley store.

Like a woman scorned

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Theodore Turner tried to kiss and make up but ended up with eight stitches on his tongue instead.

Police reported Wednesday Turner, 27, and his girlfriend, Carmen Holstein, 35, were sitting in a bar the previous night when his teeth caught the form of another woman.

Miss Holstein noticed the going's on, and Turner turned to kiss her and calm her down.

She bit his tongue, which required eight stitches.

Police said no charges were filed.

Quiet day for Vikings

© N.Y. Times Service

N E W Y O R K — Thanksgiving, it so happens, will be a day of quiet for the Viking spacecraft on and around Mars.

The motions of the planets have reached a point at which the sun Thursday is directly between Mars and Earth, an alignment known as solar conjunction that produces a blackout of Viking-to-Earth communications.

This marks the end of the normal missions of "Viking 1" and 2 and the beginning of the "extended" missions that it is hoped will permit scientific observations through an entire Martian year of 25 months.

Viking 1 deployed a landing craft to the surface on July 20, and Viking 2, on Sept. 3. Both landers and both orbiting vehicles were reported Wednesday by flight controllers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., to be in good condition for the extended operations.

They were, at least, the last time they were heard from.

For weeks, as Mars moved closer and closer to conjunction, solar interference increasingly disrupted radio signals to and from the spacecraft. The static caused a growing number of errors in the transmitted data.

This led flight controllers to command the spacecraft two weeks ago to suspend transmissions of all but certain "housekeeping" information, the status reports of essential systems. A minimum of scientific data, including the results of on-going tests in search of Martian life, was being recorded on board the spacecraft for later transmission.

State police said at least five other persons were hurt, one of them critically.

Officers identified the dead as Pauline Blackburn, 39, Salt Lake City, and her daughter, Lynne, 16, Melva, Dav. 61, from either Orem or Fillmore, Utah — officers were not certain — was critically hurt.

She was taken to the intensive care unit at Idaho Falls Hospital.

Four others receiving lesser injuries also were taken to Idaho Falls Hospital for treatment.

State police at Pocatello said the accident still was under investigation this morning.

But they said it appeared a car driven by Donald R. Ellsworth, 21, Basalt, rear-ended a car driven by Newell Day, Fillmore, Utah, catapulting it into still another car driven by Lee N. Day, 29, Orem. Mrs. Blackburn and her daughter apparently were in Newell Day's car.

Ford, kin spend day at retreat

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — President Ford and a dozen relatives settled in at this mountain retreat today for a traditional turkey dinner on what he termed a "truly special" Thanksgiving.

Aides said the President would spend the holiday relaxing with his family before working a few hours Friday and Saturday on the 1976 federal budget. He returns to Washington late Sunday.

The President and his wife, Betty, were joined by their daughter, Susan, sons Steve and Michael, Michael's wife, Gayle, and Ford's three brothers from Michigan — Tom, Dick and Jim — and their wives.

Jack Ford, the President's third son, is vacationing in the Bahamas.

On Oct. 25 — a week before he lost the presidential election to Jimmy Carter — Ford issued a Thanksgiving proclamation.

"Let each of us resolve this Thanksgiving Day to make the coming year one in which our every deed will reflect our constant gratitude to God," Ford said. "Let us set a standard of honor, justice and charity against which all the years of our third century may be measured. Let us make this Thanksgiving a truly special one."

The Ford family's Thanksgiving menu included consomme, roast turkey with giblet gravy, bread dressing, whipped potatoes, candied sweet potatoes, green peas with mushrooms, a garden salad, cranberry sauce, dinner rolls and eggnog.

Before arriving at this retreat in the Catoctin mountains, Ford had his first post-election chat with Sen. Robert Dole, his vice presidential running mate.

Dole said they discussed "how we almost put it together" for a victory.

"We just wished each other well — we were a great team, we almost did it," Dole said in a brief interview as he left the White House.

Dole said he asked for the meeting because he thought it appropriate to "sit down and reflect a little bit" on the reasons for their narrow loss.

He gave no specifics but said he and Ford agreed there were some "things we should have done and places we should have gone."

Ford met at the White House with budget advisers for the sixth time in eight days. He will submit a budget to Congress in January for the 1976 fiscal year starting next Oct. 1.

Carter, clan dine Southern style

PLAINES, Ga. (UPI) — With much to celebrate on this Thanksgiving holiday, President-elect Jimmy Carter and his wife Rosalynn gathered their clan today for a traditional Southern-style roast turkey dinner, cornbread dressing feast.

Four generations of Carters, including "Miss Lillian," the future president's mother, and Jason, his year-old grandson, got together at the Carter's ranch-style home off Main St. An aide said they just wanted to have a "private" time together.

Mrs. Carter prepared the early evening dinner, which also included fresh cranberry sauce, avocado and grapefruit salad, cheese ring with strawberry preserves, Brussels sprouts with brown butter, green beans, homemade rolls and ambrosia, a Southern dessert of fruits sprinkled with shredded coconut.

More trips to capital

PLAINES, Ga. (UPI) — Jimmy Carter expects to visit Washington several more times between now and the Jan. 20 inauguration in preparing for the presidency.

Aides said the President-elect likely will fly to Washington about once every two weeks. But they said he has no plans to visit again with Ford and members of Congress.

Carter returned to his Plains home Tuesday night from his first post-election trip to Washington, where he met with Ford and members of Congress.

Carter said he planned to have a quiet couple of days at home through Thanksgiving. He brought with him from Washington a briefling book twice the size of a big phone directory.

Two Georgia state officials — Tourism Director Ed Spiva and Attorney General Arthur Bolton — scheduled a visit today with the former governor, apparently to discuss Plains' transition from a sleepy hamlet to the home of a president.

Carter has stayed out of the limelight since his arrival Tuesday night from Washington where he had his first round of post-election briefings with President Ford, members of the Cabinet and bipartisan congressional leaders.

Rep. Andrew Young, D-Ga., said Carter "sensed a positive mood" in Washington which he thought would bode well for his presidency in its early months.

Carter so far has made only one formal appointment.

Jody Powell to be his press secretary — but he announced he intends to appoint an Atlanta banker friend, Bert Lance, to serve as either director of the powerful Office of Management and Budget or as Secretary of the Treasury.

After a rash of published reports that Lance was being tapped to be budget director, Carter passed the word that "there is virtually no doubt that Bert Lance will be going to Washington ... to serve in the Cabinet or a Cabinet-level position."

Major US steel makers announce price boosts

By United Press International

Admettively "surprised," White House economists want to study the 6 per cent price increase for sheet steel products made by National Steel Corp., one of two steel producers to announce price hikes Wednesday.

National Steel, the nation's No. 3 steel maker, said it will raise sheet steel prices Dec. 1, and No. 7 Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp., one of the stainless steel producers to announce price increases at this time, said its current situation is similar to that which existed only last August when market conditions forced steel producers to rescind an even smaller price increase planned at that time.

Lille, the council would submit a report on its findings to President Ford as soon as possible.

If National's price increase holds, it would be the third major increase in the industry's steel prices in less than two years.

Sheet steel products are basic to the production of cars and household appliances. The Council on Wage and Price Stability has asked National for information on production, costs, profits and expected sales linked to the increase.

"We are surprised by National's decision since it does not appear that demand for steel products is strong enough to sustain a price increase," the council said.

About 45 minutes later, the spokesman said, a similar package addressed to the CIA was found on the fifth floor of the Post Office in lower Manhattan and turned over to the bomb squad.

Both packages were 8-by-10 inch manila envelopes containing a flammable substance, wires and a battery, the spokesman said. He said they were being studied to determine their origin.

ARE YOU GIVING THE GOVERNMENT MONEY IT WANTS YOU TO KEEP?

INCREDIBLE AS IT MAY SOUND . . .

In this age of escalating taxes, thousands of Idaho men and women fail to take advantage of a legitimate tax break.

Under a bill passed by Congress if you are employed and not covered by a pension plan, you can set aside $1,500 or 15% of your income, whichever is less, under the new Individual Retirement Account (IRA). If employed, your spouse can also participate in the plan.

When you create this special plan for yourself, your annual deposits will be completely TAX DEDUCTIBLE. Earnings on the funds you set aside will compound tax free as well. Only when the money is paid out to you will you owe any federal income tax — probably at a considerably lower rate than you now pay.

YOUR PERSONAL RETIREMENT FUND will grow LARGER and FASTER than an equal investment earning the same return subject to income taxes.

FOR EXAMPLE, if you set aside $1,500.00 each year in an IRA account at IB&T, you might accumulate:

	WITH the help of a tax-sheltered account with IB&T	WITHOUT the help of a tax-sheltered account with IB&T

Thanksgivings past and present

Thanksgiving, more than any other holiday, is the time Americans optimistically look at their national and speak kindly about their personal lives.

The holiday pays homage to ancestors who struggled with cold winters, famine, disease and still managed to set aside a day to be thankful for the world around them.

Three and a half centuries have come and gone since the first Thanksgiving but today this nation will sit down for a dinner of turkey and cranberries and re-live a tradition that began in the 1600s.

Participants in Thanksgivings past wouldn't recognize the day which traditionally marked the completion of a good harvest. Americans today cook turkey in a microwave oven, not in an earthen pit.

We flick on the television for entertainment instead of pitch horseshoes.

Yet sometime today most families will make some mention of what Thanksgiving means and the spirit of the holiday will continue as it has since that cold fall day on Cape Cod. With friends and relatives around us we will make some small, personal declaration today about why our lives are good.

Along the New England coast centuries ago the first celebrants of Thanksgiving praised their crops, their newly constructed shelters and storage barns.

Their thanks were directed at the necessities which would help them make it through a long winter.

Thinking of the significance of Thanksgiving today, America might take note of the tone of those first observances.

We too, should be thankful for what we have today. Our horn of plenty overflows.

But as we recognize the wealth in our lives, our most important affirmation must be to preserve our wealth, and our world, for future generations.

If 350 more Thanksgivings will be celebrated in America it will be because our generation and those that follow managed to maintain a natural environment which allows mankind to live.

Our world is vastly different from the world of 1620. We have more than four billion neighbors on Earth. We have a depleted energy supply. We face the prospect of war so horrible it defies comparison to past centuries.

Still, we can endure and prosper.

To do so will take a renewed effort to preserve our world and what is good in it. The air, the land, the natural resources, are as important to future Thanksgiving celebrations as they were to the Pilgrims.

This sense of obligation to future generations, probably is the most important value which America should consider on Thanksgiving Day, 1976.

New faces in power

By NEA/London Economist News Service

Standing on Lenin's tomb recently, counting the record number of portraits of himself carried in the Soviet Union's 50th birthday parade, Leonid Brezhnev also had to contemplate the thought of two virtually unknown quantities in the capitals of the two powers that loom largest in his view: Jimmy Carter and Hua Kuo Feng.

After his heavy investment in Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger, and the long estrangement from the Chinas of Mao and Chou, Brezhnev must find the two new faces in Washington and Peking both pretty inscrutable.

The Russians have switched off their dithers against China since Mao died and instead laid down a propaganda barrage of appeals for reconciliation. Whoever Hua may be, he does not have 50 years of stored-up grievances against the Russians as Mao did, so they are naturally anxious to give him a chance to kiss and make up while he is still new enough in office to be too heavily committed to specific policy positions.

The Soviet appeals recall Russia's former aid to China, "obliquely" referring to the military chiefs (whose support for Hua sealed his victory) a resumption of the flow of Soviet arms to China that was cut off in 1960. The wooing has been accompanied by a discreet threat that this may be "China's last chance" — before the arrival of "a new generation of Soviet leaders" who would have no friendly memories of cooperation with generals or anybody else in China.

For the first time in a decade, the keynote speech during the Soviet anniversary rallies, delivered on Nov. 5, included no attack on China and did not provoke a walkout of Chinese diplomats. In sorrow, not anger, the Chinese-Soviet rift was described as "unjustifiable and unnatural."

Two days later this restraint seemed to carry a reward in the shape of a ritual message of greetings from the Chinese government which, unlike the equivalent 1975 message, did not make it a precondition for improved relations that there should be "practical steps" towards solving the Chinese-Soviet frontier dispute. But next day China's chief representative at the United Nations denounced Russia as the world's most dangerous source of war, and the Peking news agency described dominated Eastern Europe as "a colonial empire."

So far, the suspension of Soviet invective against China has brought no corresponding gesture from Peking. Indeed, China's denunciation of Russia at the UN was judged to be the fiercest such attack since Mao's death.

Brezhnev has more information about Carter than he has about Hua; but he must be aware how misleading this information could be. Carter seemed, at one point during the election campaign, to have told the Russians that they could invade Yugoslavia without fear of an American reaction; but he has since taken pains to make it clear that they could not. He accused President Ford and Kissinger of letting Russia monopolize the benefits of detente; but he has not explained what he would do to rectify this.

He was encouragingly ambiguous, from Russia's point of view, about his attitude towards prospect of Communists in a future Italian government. He talked tough about the Arabs, stressed America's "total commitment" to Israel, and backed the Soviet Jews' demands for the right to emigrate to the extent of telegraphing a message of support to their leaders in Moscow, an action that has evoked a Soviet retort.

Brezhnev can hardly assume that a Carter administration's policies will strictly follow the lines apparently laid out during the campaign. There is no foreign policy option that Carter has not kept as wide open as he possibly could.

For the time being, Brezhnev must live with the thought that the intentions of both Carter and Hua remain "a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma"; not a happy reversal of roles for a Soviet ruler on the eve of his 71st year.

The world power triangle has new men on two of the points. And that raises problems for the senior member. As viewed by Kremlin policy makers these days, Washington and Peking appear equally inscrutable.

Ex-presidents often become decorations

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — What are we now to do with Gerald Ford? Grover Cleveland once suggested that ex-presidents be taken to five-acre lots and shot. On reflection, however, he admitted that five acres seemed needlessly large, and, anyway, ex-presidents have suffered enough. Hence we remain baffled by their presence.

Very often the nation has been content to deposit former executives on the rubbish pile of history. We have long had provisions to call our federal judges out of retirement for emergency duty. Generals stand by for all of their lives. But as for faded presidents, as Harry Truman used to say, "They are just allowed to starve."

Truman's remark was a figurative one, but not altogether. For most of America's history ex-presidents were not only turned out to pasture but literally left to go hungry if that be the case. With no pension or federal provision, for example, Tom Jefferson had to sell his library to Congress to eat — and eventually died $40,000 in debt. John Adams also expired in genteel poverty. Ulysses Grant once had but $10 to his name and Woodrow Wilson lived out his years on charity.

The financial abuse ended with the departure of Truman, when a following Congress instituted the first arrangement for the economic security of former presidents. Indeed today this arrangement has become lavish, even excessive, to the point where the un-elected Ford, in office only two years, will receive an annual pension of $100,000, an annual staff stipend of $60,000 and $1 million in transition funds.

And yet though Ford will be most comfortable in retirement — he is the only politician in America to profit so handsomely from Watergate — there is still the question of whether the nation can find further use for him. History does not offer much optimism. Herbert Hoover once remarked that the only thing for an ex-president to do is "take pills and dedicate libraries." We seldom encourage much more.

There are exceptions. However, for one, organized the Hoover Commission in retirement, and redirected the bureaucracy toward greater efficiency. William Howard Taft became a Justice of the Supreme Court. Jefferson created the University of Virginia. John Adams won nine terms in Congress. And John Tyler also went from the White House to Congress, albeit the Provisional Confederate Congress.

But such service has been rare for ex-presidents. Perhaps because their options have been limited. The able Taft, for instance, wanted to return at the end of his term to the practice of law, but could not because he felt it improper to appear before federal judges he himself may have appointed. As for other fields, there have always been offers for retired chiefs, but as Calvin Coolidge used to explain, "they don't want me, they want to hire a former president."

To be sure, as Hoover added, "There are small pickings for former presidents except for inappropriate corporate connections." The alternative is to become a columnist and crowd some worthy work out of the press; to take soap or pill money from broadcasting news comments. Any of these mean more or less exploitation of the presidency."

So it is that many ex-presidents have merely wasted away. And certainly the best example is Theodore Roosevelt. Only 50 upon leaving the White House, he tried and failed to exhaust his energies on such things as expeditions and writing. Frustrated, he entered presidential politics again as an ill-fated third party champion. A has-been in the prime of his life, he weakened, and died embittered at 69.

Jerry Ford is only 63, and nearly as robust as Roosevelt. It is said he does not need the stimulus of high power as have many of his predecessors, but it cannot be expected that his liddown from office — a euphoric office that came to him in an extraordinary way — will be easy. It is a hard thing for a large man when the phone goes quiet.

Perhaps he should be given a seat as a senior-at-large. The idea has often been discussed regarding other ex-presidents. The alternative may be to let him atrophy, to become a curious Republican decoration, to watch him grow old in the Sunday supplements. That seems a shame.

Quoting books you never read

By RUSSELL BAKER

© N.Y. Times Service

(UNDATED) — Someone has sent a copy of Alexis de Tocqueville's "Democracy in America," which reminds me that I have never read it, although I have quoted it frequently in writings which sought to masquerade as learned. Driving home with points with quotations from books you haven't read is a science taught in college, and de Tocqueville is one of the first authorities freshmen learn to cite.

The reason is not hard to find. De Tocqueville is so widely unread, even among professors, that anybody who throws out a de Tocqueville quotation is almost certain to put his reader on the intellectual defensive. It is hard to take points of the grade of a boy who can quote a book you yourself have never read, especially if it is a book you know you should have read.

The professor has probably been quoting an unread de Tocqueville himself so that, while he is 99 per cent certain his student is indulging in chicanery, he will be reluctant to challenge him. Suppose the student really has read the thing and is conversant enough with it to be able to expose the professor as a quoter of unread books. The best thing for a professor to do when faced with a de Tocqueville quotation is grit his teeth, grant a passing grade and let unread Frenchmen be.

Now, I hope professors all over America will forbear from deluging me with mail stating that they have, too, read de Tocqueville. I am sure five or six of them have, just as I am sure the rest of them are so determined to brazen it out that they would stoop to wrangling false outraged letters to wretched journalists. In any case, it is not professors I am concerned with here but the quoting of unread writers.

Of all the great unread writers, I believe de Tocqueville to be the most widely quoted. This could be wrong. Quibblers can probably make a case that Shakespeare holds the championship. Even illiterates quote Shakespeare constantly. This is because Shakespeare said almost everything first, so that it is hard to talk more than 10 minutes without quoting something he wrote.

The difference between Shakespeare and de Tocqueville, however, is that most people don't quote Shakespeare consciously. They don't even know the phrase they are using was originally Shakespeare's. Many of them are the kind of people who might even offer you a punch in the nose if you accused them of quoting Shakespeare.

The point is that nobody quotes Shakespeare for the purpose of appearing learned. Nor even people who have read Shakespeare. Anybody who did would be marked down for being too poorly read to know who the most quotable unread writers are. The college student who tries to dazzle a professor by wrangling, for example, "As Shakespeare observed, 'To be or not to be, that is the question,'" — well, this student will certainly not make the dean's list, and probably not the next semester.

What makes de Tocqueville such an interesting unread authority is that he seems equally popular among all the intellectual classes. He is quoted by high savants popular among all the intellectual classes. He is quoted by high savants in the New York Review of Books just as freely as he is quoted by newspaper reporters describing the latest wrangle in the state legislature. His wisdom trips off the pen of king or commoner with equal felicity.

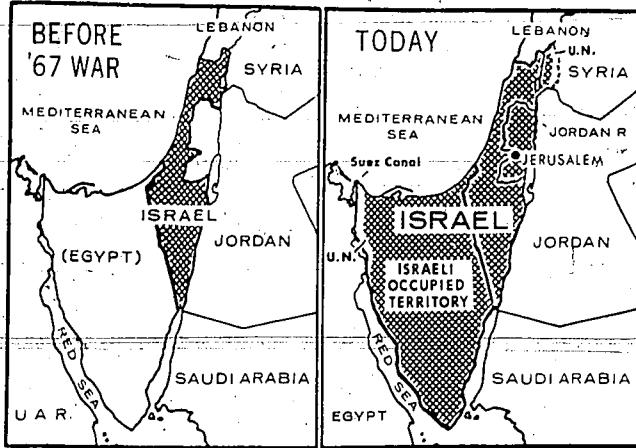

I know of no other great unread author with such wide class appeal. Indeed, you can usually catalogue the intellectual grouping to which a quote belongs by noting the unread writers he chooses to quote. No commercial writer, the sort who goes for recognition by the Book-of-the-Month Club, ever quotes Goethe, a favorite of more refined writers hoping to display the broad reach of their minds in the academic journals. I have no idea why this should be, but there it is.

Goethe is undoubtedly the greatest unread poet of the West, just as de Tocqueville is the greatest unread analyst of American governmental principles. The anthologies of quotations from which unreaders cull their de Tocqueville lines have an equally commodity value of quotable Goethe lines, but the middlebrows and lowbrows invariably pass over Goethe and zero in on de Tocqueville. The eyebrows show the same curious disdain for quoting Thomas Jefferson, who is perhaps the country's greatest unread politico. The instant you hear somebody across a crowded room say, "As Thomas Jefferson said, 'The tree of liberty must be refreshed,'" you know immediately that he is a person who does not aspire to entertain the Harvard faculty.

For some reason the intellectual elite simply will not quote Jefferson, although he would certainly rank among the ejits of them.

The point of all this was undoubtedly put far more sharply than I could possibly put it by Vico, and I would quote Vico here but for the unfortunate accident of having misplaced my "Book of Greatest Quotations." It is a very good book and filled with splendid quotations by Vico, a name which inspires absolutely fawning respect from the profoundest thinkers when followed by a suitable quotation.

I have never read Vico, of course, and had never heard of him until the "Book of Greatest Quotations" came along. I am uncertain whether Vico has a first name, but intend to look it up one of these days. As de Tocqueville observed, "This tendency is natural and inevitable." Who could have put it better?

Hard-liner gains Moscow envoy job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A quiet and unprecedented diplomatic tug-of-war has apparently been won by the United States, with the Soviet Union accepting a hard-line career foreign service officer as the new American envoy to the Kremlin.

The White House announced Wednesday that Malcolm Toon, 60, presently U.S. ambassador to Israel, has been officially named ambassador to Moscow. His name was put forward more than two months ago, but the Soviets did not give him customary acceptance.

Normally, in such a case, acceptance is required and the name is withdrawn if the host country does not give its approval. In this case, the State Department took the unusual step of announcing that Toon's name would not be withdrawn despite the apparent Soviet objection.

The result was a stand-off with the U.S. embassy job remaining vacant ever since Walter Stoessel was reassigned to West Germany in September.

State Department officials said that the Soviets finally agreed to Toon, and he will be given a "recess appointment" which means he can go to Moscow immediately without Senate approval.

Officials speculated that the reason behind the Soviet capitulation may have something to do with reports that Anatoli Dobrynin, Soviet ambassador to Washington, is being reassigned and the Soviets may soon be asking American approval for Dobrynin's replacement.

Toon, who has been in the foreign service since 1939, served in the Moscow embassy as political officer, once headed the Soviet affairs office and served as U.S. ambassador in Prague and Bucharest as well as Tel Aviv.

He is regarded as a hard-liner on East-West affairs.

Tanaka trial set to open Jan. 27

TOKYO (UPI) — Former Premier Kakuei Tanaka will go on trial Jan. 27 on charges he received $1.6 million from Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the Tochigi District Court said today.

Tanaka, who was premier between 1972 and 1974, was specifically charged with receiving $1.6 million in bribes and violating the country's Foreign Exchange and Trade Control law.

If found guilty, the 59-year-old conservative politician could face several years' imprisonment. Tanaka was arrested last July, to become the first "senior ranking government official" allegedly involved in the $12 million Lockheed payoff scandal.

Status hike eyed

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UPI) — Commerce Secretary Elliot Richardson talked with Hungarian government leaders again today after being told that Hungary strongly desires the Most Favored Nation status in its trade with the United States.

Pal Romany, Hungarian minister of agriculture, told Richardson Wednesday that Hungary aims at exporting its goods tax free to the United States, like other East European countries.

US envoy killed

MITZPE RUMON, Israel (UPI) — A tourist vehicle carrying diplomatic families overturned in the Negev Desert Wednesday night, killing an American diplomat and injuring 11 other persons, authorities said.

The U.S. embassy identified the dead diplomat as James Dean, second secretary in the economic section. A spokesman said Patricia Younts, wife of Science Attaché George Younts Jr., was hospitalized but she "was not too serious."

Dean's age and hometown were not immediately available.

The Australian embassy said Alison Smith, 16, daughter of Ambassador Richard Smith, hurt her leg in the crash and was admitted to Beersheba Hospital. "It's not very serious," a spokesman said.

The embassy said the ambassador's wife, Janet, escaped injury in the crash.

Storms hampering Turks in quake rescue effort

DIYARBAKIR, Turkey (UPI) — Snow and sleet storms today hampered rescue workers trying to reach victims of a series of tremors that killed an estimated 3,000 persons in Turkey's worst earthquake in 40 years.

The quake hit provinces of impoverished eastern Turkey Friday afternoon in shocks that reduced mud-brick houses to dust. The tremors registered 7.6 on the open-ended Richter scale.

Turkish radio confirmed 574 dead in 10 sparsely populated mountainous provinces hit by the quake. The radio interrupted normal programming with funeral music.

"We fear the death toll will rise to above 3,000," Burhan Yavuzilmaz, deputy governor of Van province told the Turkish News Agency by telephone.

The worst-hit towns are Muradiye and Caldiran, at the northern end of Lake Van. About 75 per cent of the town's population may have been killed," he said.

Other local officials said many towns were almost completely devastated and estimated the death toll in Muradiye to be as high as Muradiye to be as high as dark. Women and children were sheltered in the few tents that could be mustered, witnesses said.

Earlier, Defense Minister Ferent Melen, emerging from an emergency cabinet meeting told reporters: "our information is that at least 3,000 people died."

Van state hospital officials said 250 injured were brought in during the night and more were being transported from the villages as daylight broke. Field hospitals were being set up by the Turkish Red Crescent, the equivalent of the Red Cross, the officials said.

Snow, sleet storms and subfreezing temperatures were hampering rescue operations by military rescue teams, and landslides caused by the quake had blocked roads in the area, a Van city official said.

Lebanese buffer proposed

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israeli leaders have proposed using Lebanese militiamen to set up a buffer zone in southern Lebanon between Syria forces and Israeli troops patrolling the Jewish state's northern frontier.

Government sources said the proposal was presented to U.S. representatives following Tuesday's emergency meeting of the Israeli cabinet. The United States has been relaying Israeli positions to Syria in recent weeks.

The proposal calls for Lebanese militia forces, mainly Christians, to police the buffer zone and for Syria to keep Palestinian guerrillas from reoccupying southern Lebanon as a base for possible attacks against the Jewish state.

In return, the sources said, Israel would be willing to permit token Syrian forces to cross the Litani River, which runs parallel to the border about 25 miles inside Lebanon.

The river is generally regarded as symbolizing the point beyond which Israel will not tolerate foreign intervention.

Officials speculated that the reason behind the Soviet capitulation may have something to do with reports that Anatoli Dobrynin, Soviet ambassador to Washington, is being reassigned and the Soviets may soon be asking American approval for Dobrynin's replacement.

Man vows to win in court or die

© Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — James Wolfe said if he must, he will make a career out of ending his unhappy marriage.

"I'll not stop until I win or I die, whichever comes first," the said bitterly.

After his sixty-fourth court appearance, Wolfe found himself still legally married to the woman he has accused of cheating him into wedlock.

Wolfe, 46, a real estate broker, charged that his wife, Judith, had produced a phony death certificate for her first husband in order to marry him (Wolfe).

The first husband, Thomas Haffner, of Denver, is not only living but testified against her during a jury trial last March.

The jury found her guilty of fraud and recommended the marriage be annulled. Wolfe sought the annulment because as a Roman Catholic he does not believe in divorce. However, Circuit Court Associate Judge Bernard Wolfe (no relation) later reversed the jury's recommendation, saying fraud is not sufficient grounds for divorce.

The judge now has reaffirmed his decision.

"I'm back where I was," plaintiff Wolfe said, adding that he would appeal.

Meanwhile, Wolfe said the 3-year-long case has ruined him financially and he does not know how much he owes in attorney's fees.

"How can I make a living when I am practicing law here nine days a week?" he said outside the courtroom.

His only consolation is that his wife, who now lives in Fremont, Mich., agreed to let their 10-year-old son spend the Thanksgiving holidays with him.

Billy Carter runs for mayor

PLAINES, Ga. (UPI) — The President-elect isn't the only Carter with political ambitions. Jimmy's brother Billy disclosed Wednesday he is running for mayor of Plains.

The 39-year-old service station proprietor said he was investing $15 — the cost of the filing fee — in the Dec. 6 contest against incumbent Mayor A.L. Blanton.

Blanton, the town barber, defeated him in the 1974 mayoral election by six votes. Billy said he expects a hard race again, because his beer drinking allies, Baptists and old ladies.

VALLETTA, Malta (UPI) — Sir Michael Gonzi, the 91-year-old Roman Catholic archbishop of Malta, is retiring, aides said Wednesday.

They said Gonzi, who has been archbishop for 33 years, will go to Rome to ask Pope Paul VI to appoint his successor.

New Mexican eyed for FPC sent

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — Richard Montoya, chairman of the New Mexico Public Service Commission, has confirmed he is under consideration by the Carter administration for a possible appointment to the Federal Power Commission.

Montoya said he had submitted a resume at the request of Bob Brown, a member of the Carter transition team staff.

He added that he would give the appointment "serious consideration" if it were made.

Pope pleased with progress

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI said Wednesday he was pleased with progress being made to improve relations between Christians and Jews.

"On our part we express deep satisfaction over the improvement that has taken place in Jewish-Christian relations and we express the hope that collaboration will continue to foster mutual understanding and esteem," the Pope said.

The Pope made his remarks to members of the U.S. Anti-Defamation League who attended his weekly general audience.

Arrested singer seeking treatment

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — After two arrests in as many days, singer Jerry Lee Lewis checked into a hospital for treatment of an ulcer while his wife was admitted to a separate hospital for her "nerves."

Because of... his hospitalization, Lewis avoided his third arrest Wednesday for failing to appear in City Court on charges of public drunkenness and carrying a pistol in connection with an incident at the gates of Elvis Presley's mansion.

A bench warrant had been issued when the 41-year-old singer did not show up for arraignment proceedings, but it was dismissed later in the day when his attorney, Robert Wampler, informed the court of "Lewis'" hospitalization and the hearing was reset for Dec. 15.

Home found for caboose

GLENN'S FERRY — The shiny yellow caboose donated to Glenn's Ferry by Union Pacific more than a year ago has at last found a home.

The committee appointed to find a permanent location for the display railroad car has had a long and discouraging time trying to find the proper place to put the visible reminder of the town's long railroad history.

Haney Seed Co., Twin Falls, which also has a Glenn's Ferry operation, this fall leased land from the UP along the tracks and has agreed to sub-lease a corner acre so the caboose will have a proper home near the main intersection of town.

Lancaster honored with tree

TWIN FALLS — County Commissioners and other officials and employees at the Twin Falls County Courthouse have given County Clerk Harold Lancaster what they think will be a lasting gift.

Lancaster, who has just completed a new home southwest of Twin Falls, is retiring at the end of the year after more than 13 years as county clerk.

Members of the board of county commissioners and several other county officials met at the Lancaster home Wednesday morning to witness the planting of the first of two green spruce trees.

County Commissioner Bill Chancery said the trees were donated by the College of Southern Idaho from the school's tree farm at the campus. Planting costs were provided by courthouse officials and workers as a farewell gift to Lancaster. Arrangements were made by Chancery and Zoning Administrator Ed Woods.

Beer prevails over skin

DENVER (UPI) — It was either beer or skin-flacks for theater owner Carlin Smith. He chose beer.

Smith, worried about dwindling attendance and his inability to obtain first-run or children's movie, had to choose between 3-D, beer or pornography to draw patrons.

He asked the state for permission to allow the Denver Twin Theater to become the first in Colorado to sell beer. Despite some reservations from the attorney general's office, the Liquor Enforcement Division of the State Revenue Department gave its permission.

Smith, president of Highland Theaters, Inc., and a vision at the intersection and would have been located very close to the tracks.

Now the only remaining problem facing Joslyn, who currently is visiting a daughter in Chicago, is how to get the caboose moved to its permanent home.

After the turn down from UP officials for the desired location last fall, Joslyn and UP officials explored possibilities of placing the caboose at the Three Island State Park near town, but this did not work out either.

All this time the caboose has sat quietly several blocks down the tracks from the Commercial Avenue intersection, awaiting a permanent home.

Glenn's Ferry obtained the caboose through the efforts of Mayor Dayle Messerly, who, like most longtime residents here, has railroading in his background. The town was a former division point on the railroad.

The new location probably is better than the one originally wanted, according to Ed Bostic, city clerk, as placement of the caboose on the corner could have created some hazards. It could have cut

Safety evaluations finished in state

BOISE — Safety evaluations have been concluded on numerous highway construction projects completed by the Idaho Transportation Department in Idaho between 1972 and 1974.

The projects evaluated completed of 554 miles of roadside improvements and 37 spot improvements, all of which resulted in an estimated reduction of over 500 accidents per year. In addition to preventing accidents, the highway improvements also resulted in increased motorists' convenience and lower maintenance costs.

The various highway improvements and their estimated contribution to accident reduction area as follows:

— 24 intersection projects including signalization, channelization, and sight distance improvement

— Nine miles of new highway saved approximately 45 accidents per year.

— And finally, other roadside improvements including guardrails, signing, lighting, and slope modification were estimated to have saved 121 accidents per year.

Smith said he hopes selling 3-D beer will prevent the theater from having to look elsewhere. "Triple-X rated" pictures in order to make a financial profit.

"This is a means of upgrading the theater, not downgrading it," he said. "We do not want to show skin-flacks. We do not want to show 3-D movies — but we don't want to lose $75,000 a year."

Soviet missiles developed by spying

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Defense secrets leaked to the Soviets led to development of a new Soviet antisubmarine missile which employs some features of Australia's best weapons systems, a national magazine reported today.

It was the second consecutive week the magazine, the Bulletin, has reported that there have been intelligence leaks to the Soviets from the Defense Department.

In its current edition, the Bulletin said the new Soviet missile — some of its leading features patterned after Australia's sophisticated Ikara antisubmarine missile — is variously designated as the SUW-N-1 or SS-N-14 and is deployed in the new class of Soviet helicopter cruisers.

"The Russian missile incorporates many of the features of Ikara and Australian intelligence officials believe that strict security surrounding our system enabled the Russians to copy some of its important features," the magazine said.

"Soviet missile technology has been consistently behind Western standards because of the backwardness of its electronics industry," the magazine said.

"The Russian armed forces have always relied on making up for this by copying Western systems, as well as by vastly outspending the West and producing hardware in much greater numbers. "Ikara is the most successful weapon development of Australia's defense research establishments and has been chosen not only for our own destroyers but for installation in British naval ships," the Bulletin said.

"In the past three years more than 30 documents of the very highest security classification have been leaked and some of them are thought to have found their way to the Soviet Embassy in Canberra or the KGB and GRU (Soviet military intelligence)," the magazine said.

Export prospects bring spud gains

CHICAGO — Except for Maine potatoes, the commodity futures market was mixed or mostly lower Wednesday.

Commodity News Service said Maine spuds closed mixed up in the new May contract after a day of heavy trading. Trade and commission house buying and short covering were dominant market features. Turnover was 2,750 cars.

Pre-Thanksgiving evening up was the main feature of the soybean complex, where beans were 3 to 5½ cents higher, oil 20 to 8 points higher and meal 1.20 lower to unchanged.

Early reports of the suspension of the 10 per cent duty on potato imports was the key factor, along with reports of padding for export in the Red River Valley and Maine.

Live cattle closed lower despite local and short covering.

Feeder cattle closed higher after a quiet start to the day, despite reports of padding for export.

New York Comex silver dragged into the close with losses of 400 to 550 points despite gold's afternoon rally. Pre-holiday evening up dominated quiet trading with volume placed at 18,000. March dropped to 5½ cents off early local selling, then rallied about 2 cents when trade buying forced locals to cover.

Farm safety info stalled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal officials have postponed circulation of 60 health and safety pamphlets for farmworkers because of the ridicule generated by one pamphlet's warnings on the hazards of slippery mercury, a public interest group charged Wednesday.

The Health Research Group, a Ralph Nader organization, said the safety brochure, in color, illustrates how Congress and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration have "bowed down" to the farm owners and their "lobbyists" by stalling farm safety programs.

In a Thanksgiving report, the Health Research Group said:

"Congress excluded 87 per cent of farms from federal inspection for the next year by barring inspection of farms employing 10 or fewer workers."

The OSHA stalled proposed rules to "ensure that basic human decency of toilets and cool water for farmworkers in the field."

Some 60 health and safety pamphlets, many aimed at farmworkers with limited reading abilities, were postponed indefinitely when OSHA Secretary Morton Corn "melted under the heat" of public scorn for a brochure on safety with beef cattle.

The cattle pamphlet became the butt of Washington jokes last summer because it contained what critics considered simplistic and ludicrously obvious safety warnings, including a notation that "manure is slippery."

"Saying manure is slippery may sound funny to a city slicker or to a farm owner looking to destroy OSHA, but it is no funnier than saying that cars can skid on wet leaves," the Health Research Group said.

"Since July, not one new farmworkers' safety pamphlet has been published, though about 30 are ready to print."

An OSHA employee reviewing the pamphlets for publication said they have been delayed in his office because he has been overwhelmed with work on other issues.

The logjam is not an agency policy," he said. "We are still going to have easy to read farm pamphlets."

The Health Research Group report urged readers to write their Congressmen and the OSHA on behalf of farmworkers, supplying sample letters for that purpose.

Idaho gets funds for housing

BOISE (UPI) — An initial allocation of $1,472,297 of Section 8 assisted housing funds has been received for Idaho for fiscal year 1977, Charles L. Holley Jr., director of the Boise Area Office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development announced today.

He said of the total allocation, $570,565 would be for the metropolitan area of Ada County, which would support an estimated 149 units in new construction projects or 250 units of existing housing. The remaining $876,632 would go to non-metropolitan areas in the state to support an estimated 234 units in new construction projects or 431 units of existing housing, Holley said.

He said priority consideration for funding will be given to Section 202 elderly projects, Section 23 conversion projects and Farmers Home Administration projects.

The Section 8 program provides rental assistance to qualified low-income households.

No saving at all

BRECON, Wales (UPI) — A British soldier has been sentenced to 84 days' detention for firing his machine gun out the window of an army truck on a country road to save the trouble of carrying unspent rounds back to the barracks.

James Pitchers, 27, said at a court martial Tuesday he fired 12 machine gun rounds as the truck moved along a country road last spring because they were left over from firing range practice.

Prosecutors said at least one motorist trying to pass the truck had to slam on his brakes when Pitchers poked the weapon out the window.

Appeal for press funds succeeds

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — The magazine published by the late Mohandas Gandhi's grandson has received nearly 75 per cent of the donations it sought to buy its own printing press and negate one of the threats to its existence, an employee said today.

Himal "Magazine, which has run into trouble with the state government, appealed to its Indian readers in the Oct. 24 issue to contribute 50,000 rupees ($5,555).

An employee, who requested anonymity, said in an interview that "so far we have received about 37,000 rupees."

The Bombay-based weekly has often printed articles critical of government action since Prime Minister Indira Gandhi imposed a nationwide state of emergency nearly 17 months ago.

The printers told Himal to find another printer. It did but that printer has also bowed out.

Some printers have required that Himal first submit all articles to be published to the editor, which the magazine is fighting.

Under the emergency, India's newspapers have been censored and only two of the daily English-language papers circulated in the capital have printed even mild criticism of the government. Both have faced a barrage of court suits from Mrs. Gandhi's government.

Conviction in Gem drug case reversed

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's Supreme Court today reversed the conviction of Gary Thomas Landers on a charge of possession of a controlled substance.

Gandhi went to court to fight the deposit and so far has not paid it.

The government also ordered the owners of the press

During the trial the defendant filed a motion to suppress the evidence obtained in the warrantless and unconsented search of the automobile on the grounds that the search was unconstitutional. The motion was denied.

Since then the high court has ruled in two other cases and on the basis of these decisions the state confessed error and the judgment in this case was reversed.

Phosphate usage trimmed by new detergent agent

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Procter & Gamble Co., one of the country's biggest producers of laundry detergents, Tuesday announced development of a material it boasted "can pave the way toward further reductions in the amount of phosphate used in laundry detergents."

The company in 1972 developed a "surfactant" system that allowed cutting the use of phosphate in its detergents by half. Most of the company's granulated detergents have now been converted to that formula.

Tuesday's announcement concerned development of a new builder material called aluminoisilicate.

"We find that aluminoisilicate works extremely well in removing the calcium hardness from water so that the rest of the detergent can perform effectively," said P&G President John G. Smale. "Extensive and continuing testing shows this new material to be safe for humans and the environment."

However, Smale added that the aluminoisilicate does not remove magnesium, the other major contributor to water hardness.

"Therefore," he said, "it cannot be considered a complete replacement for phosphates in detergents."

The company is now using the new material in certain boxes of "Tide" detergent being sold in northeastern and southwestern U.S. test markets. Company officials refused to say exactly where the special boxes of "Tide" are being sold "for competitive security."

"It is our intention — barring any unforeseen development — to move to new

German missile missing from Illinois city park

MILFORD, ILL. (UPI) — The eye-catcher of Milford's village park, a 25-foot World War II German V1 missile, is still missing.

The Milford American Legion Post acquired the V1 in 1958 from the Air Force because the B-52 bomber offered was too big to move from Chanute Air Force Base.

The V1 became a landmark in this Iroquois County town of 1,700, located about 50 miles south of Chicago, and no one thought much about it until more than a year ago when an Air Force visitor saw the missile and "got all excited," according to one account.

He told the park board members they could have their choice of Air Force ordnance if they would part with the missile.

The park board said nothing.

Nominee

ATLANTA banker Bert Lance will be named director of the Office of Management and Budget in the Carter administration, an Atlanta newspaper reported Wednesday. Lance, 45, is president of the National Bank of Georgia. (UPI)

A year ago August, two men in a truck arrived with written orders to take the missile to the Wright-Patterson Air Force museum in Ohio for reconditioning.

Bob Crawford, a park board member, said the men showed him a letter which looked official. He telephoned a man named in the letter and he said the man identified himself as an Air Force Colonel.

Crawford was one of several volunteers who helped load the V1 aboard a truck.

"They (the villagers) thought we would get it (V1) all fixed up and have original markings and original swastikas on it and really have something," said Dick Barker, president of the park board.

A park board member recently decided to find out what was taking the restoration so long. He called Wright Patterson and they said they knew nothing about the V1. He checked elsewhere. No missle.

Park board officials now got the idea: their rocket had been ripped off.

As embarrassed as the park board members are, none is more red faced than Lewis Mitchell, editor of the Milford Herald News, who took pictures of the missile being carted away.

Authorities figured with Mitchell's pictures they would have had an easier time tracking down the thieves.

"Unfortunately, I ruined only two rolls of film in my four years here," said Mitchell, "and that was two of them. I got hold of a bad developer."

The villagers would like their V1 back.

Soviets improve missile

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An improved submarine-launched Soviet ballistic missile will cause difficulty for the United States in verifying compliance with arms limitation agreements, according to administration sources.

The sources said Tuesday the Soviet Union had recently conducted initial testing from a submarine of its SS-NX-18 missile. The missile was launched from north of Russia and impacted on land, the sources said.

The SS-NX-18 is equipped with at least three independently targeted warheads, or MIRV's, making it the first such missile the Russians have launched at sea.

According to Pentagon officials, the SS-NX-18 is a large, two-stage missile that increases the range of earlier Russian sea-launched missiles from about 4,200 to 4,600 miles. More important, however, is an increased payload that allows the missile to carry MIRV's.

Tests of the improved missile have been underway on land for at least a year and the submarine test was not unexpected. But the presence of MIRV's on Soviet missile-launching submarines points to a problem for the United States in verifying an arms control agreement, the sources said.

The problem comes because under the total of launchers allowed the Soviet Union in the 1972 SALT I agreement, it would be numerically possible for them by using submarines to exceed the 1,320 limit.

Bridge title to Delaware pair

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Barbara Herr and Barbara Furbeck both of Wilmington, Del., scored 789 points Tuesday to win the life master women's pair crown at the American Contract Bridge League tournament.

It was the first major championship for either woman.

Joan Remey of Southfield,

Mich., and Carol Crawford of New York City finished second with 784.5 points.

Joyce Wise of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, and Diana Hall of New York City won the amateur pair title with a score of 899.5 points.

More than 2,400 players are participating in the 10-day championship which ends Sunday.

The final match will be the Reisinger Trophy Team race which begins Friday and ends Sunday.

Santa arrives

JEROME — One of the first visits of the season for Santa Claus in Magic Valley is scheduled for Jerome Friday.

Chamber of Commerce helpers said the jolly old man will arrive at 7 p.m. on the city fire truck.

He will deliver candy to all boys and girls who say they have been good the past year.

Ponderosa hearing set

BURLEY — A court hearing has been set in Rupert Monday on the scheduled foreclosure sale of the Ponderosa Inn.

Fifth District Court Judge Sherman Bellwood set the hearing this week after Ponderosa Inns, Inc., filed a motion Monday for the hearing.

The corporation is expected to ask Bellwood to set the amount for an appeals bond. Ponderosa has filed an appeal from Judge Bellwood's earlier order for sale of the property, but has not made a request for setting the necessary bond.

Posting of bond would postpone the already delayed sheriff's auction ordered by Bellwood. The judge originally set an Oct. 7 sale date, but that was blocked by a California federal bankruptcy court.

The bankruptcy action in that state was dismissed Monday. Bellwood has set a new sale date of Dec. 15, but posting of bond would delay the sale until the Idaho Supreme Court acts, probably early in 1977.

The sale was ordered to raise money to repay loans of more than $1 million due the First Federal Savings and Loan Association, Twin Falls. The two loans were made to Ponderosa Inns in 1971; the foreclosure action was filed by First Federal in December, 1975, but delayed by Ponderosa's own bankruptcy reorganization proceedings.

The appeals bond would cover possible loss of value during continued use and occupancy of the Burley convention center during the appeal period. If the amount set by Bellwood were not posted, the auction would be held in spite of the firm's filed appeal.

First Federal indicated earlier this week that it will bid on the property to the amount due it, including interest and costs of the foreclosure action.

The Oct. 7 sale date was blocked by National Funding Corporation, a California holding company, filing a Chapter 11 reorganization petition under federal bankruptcy laws.

The petition listed a part-interest transferred after Bellwood's order, in the Ponderosa Inn. The California company shows the wife of Floyd C. Anglin, Ponderosa Inns president, as one of its stockholders.

Red Cross effort planned in Minico

RUPERT — Minidoka County and its five cities will send representatives to meet with Red Cross supporters Dec. 7 in an effort to reorganize the defunct county chapter.

Connie Murphy, Heyburn, one of the Red Cross organizers, said Wednesday that at least one mayor will attend and the other four mayors have promised to send representatives.

County commissioners also have assured that a member will be at the meeting.

The session will be at 7 p.m. Dec. 7 at the Ponderosa Inn in North Burley.

Minidoka County has been without an organized Red Cross chapter for more than a year. It has no legal board of directors, since only three of the required 15-21 directors remain.

Mrs. Murphy said the county chapter has been in debt for so long that the Red Cross has written off the debt.

Jerry Voss, first aid chairman, is heading the drive for reorganization.

Despite lack of an official chapter, Minidoka County taught first aid to over 1,000 people last year, many of them in instruction sessions at the J.R. Simplot Co. food processing plant in Heyburn.

The Red Cross Bloodmobile program continues to visit to accept blood donations, but Minidoka County missed its quota last week by eight pints, falling short for the first time in recent years. The quota was 125 pints; 117 pints were donated, with six other volunteers rejected.

MV ski resorts lack white stuff

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

TWIN FALLS — Skiers in Magic Valley have little to be thankful for today.

Thanksgiving is usually the opening of the ski season, at least in some of the intermountain ski resorts.

This year not only are the Magic Valley resorts without snow, but skiers cannot travel to nearby Idaho and Utah areas for holiday skiing. No western resorts can report adequate snow, including those in Utah, Montana and Colorado.

Pomerelle, usually open to skiers by mid-November, has had several storms this year with three to four inches of snow each but most of this has melted on the lower slopes.

"Our problem at Pomerelle is usually too much snow and we have to work hard to keep ahead of it, even early in the season. This year we're still hoping for a good storm," said Woody Anderson, resort owner.

In the three years since Anderson purchased the resort, this is the only time equipment has not been operating by Thanksgiving, he said.

This year the resort has added lights to Milk and Fall runs for night skiing. Anderson said the crews worked late many nights to complete the installation ahead of anticipated snow fall. The lights are in and the equipment ready to operate.

"All we need is snow," he said.

Magic Mountain, south of Twin Falls, has had as much as eight inches of snow in storms this year, forest officials say, but warm temperatures have melted it after each storm.

Soldier Mountain and Sun Valley, with snow-making equipment, appear to be in the most favorable position for skiing within the near future.

Clouds Hinkle, Soldier Mountain official, said snow-making equipment is now nearly installed with a few electrical chores yet to be completed. He said, he is hopeful of being able to start making artificial snow Friday night and possibly have the area open for limited skiing by the weekend of Dec. 4 and 5.

He said this depends on a certain amount of cooperation from the weatherman.

"We can make snow if the temperatures drop to 28 degrees at night and we have been getting there most nights," he said.

Daytime temperatures need to be cool enough to preserve the snow if there is any heavy traffic, he said.

The snow machines at Soldier Mountain cover the entire lower portion of the hill served by the Number 1 chairlift and the J-bar lift, and can provide a sizable amount of skier terrain.

Sun Valley has been making snow for the past few weeks but is also hampered by high daytime temperatures. "It's about temperatures low enough to hold the snow it is difficult for any artificial snow equipment to provide a sufficient cover for use by the sking public," resort officials say.

Clouds Hinkle said some man-made snow for skiing but is not encouraging out-of-state visitors as yet because of the limited cover provided by the artificial means.

Weather officials say this has been one of the driest falls on record although figures for November are not yet compiled.

Arthur L. Larson, Snake River watermaster, reports precipitation to date for the month at three measuring stations show a big zero in total precipitation at Moran, a zero in total precipitation for the month.

Moran reports no precipitation in the past week and .01 of an inch for the month to date. There is no snow at Moran at this time. Normal for November shows 1.88 inches of precipitation and in 1975 there was 16 inches of snow. There was no snow at this time last year, however.

At Island Park there is no precipitation for the month but normal is 2.74 inches for November. Last year there was no snow at this time, but in 1975 there was 19 inches. Palisades had no precipitation but has a normal of 1.76 inches for November.

Minico sets public meet on North Burley rezoning

By SHANE O'NEILL

Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minidoka County commissioners will hold a public meeting next month on rezoning a North Burley area property that failed to gain approval on either of two uses.

Minidoka County Zoning Administrator William McClung said Wednesday that Robert Nielsen, legal counsel for the commissioners, is drafting a proposed ordinance that would establish commercial zoning on the Holmes property between North Burley and Heyburn.

He said notice of the hearing will be published next Tuesday or Dec. 7. The 15-day notice requirement indicates that commissioners would hear the matter at their Dec. 27 meeting.

The property, owned by Ralph Holmes, currently is zoned residential-agriculture and lies in the buffer zones of both Burley and Heyburn, with Burley able to assert some jurisdiction as large of the two cities.

The rezoning draft stems from action last week by the Minidoka County Zoning Commission. It recommended the zone change to general commercial, but specifically reflected use of the property as a bulk fuel storage area.

Henderson Oil Co. had paid earnest money on the parcel. It planned a 94,000-gallon gasoline storage facility and four large tanks for other fuel.

McClung pointed out that general commercial zoning allows no more than 100 gallons of fuel stored above ground and the Henderson proposal would not conform to maximum size for a service station within the zone. The board stipulated that no variance would be granted for a large fuel storage facility.

The zoning commission recommendation partially affirmed an earlier recommendation by the Minidoka County Planning Commission.

That body had recommended rezoning of the Holmes property and other parcels in the area as commercial. They lie between the Ponderosa Inn and an indoor-outdoor theater complex and most uses in the area already are commercial, with a nearby shopping center also planned.

The planners' action came amid controversy over a proposal earlier this fall for establishment of a dry-mix concrete plant on the Holmes site. Western Dry Mix, Inc., a Salt Lake City firm, sought to purchase the property for making Sakrete.

County courthouse undergoes facelift

TWIN FALLS — Workers in the Twin Falls County courthouse have to have a sense of humor these days.

Since late summer they have been working with half torn out walls, holes in the ceilings and floors and a host of electrical, plumbing and other equipment in their offices.

There isn't too much hope in sight for some of the workers, say county commissioners.

One of the better aspects relating to the old courthouse remodeling program has been the weather. As of the present there is no heat in the building because the old heating system has been removed to allow for installation of a new heating and air conditioning unit.

"Only this beautiful fall weather has saved us," says Merl E. Leonard, chairman of the county commission.

Some of the offices have small electric heaters to help out during morning hours, but for the most part workers have been able to get by without suffering from the cold.

Last May the county let a $469,294 contract with 200 working days. It covered building a new 4,000-square-foot addition to the county judicial building and remodeling and renovating the 10-year-old courthouse building.

The plumbing strike delayed work on the renovation project although the contractor was able to go ahead with the new holding.

On Tuesday there was only one restroom functioning in the old building and commissioners said there was a waiting line much of the time. Reed P. Maughan is housed in the basement of the old building.

The new building provides additional space for court clerks and secretaries and adds the two courtrooms for magistrates. There are three magistrates and two district judges in Twin Falls County. Space for one magistrate court and two district courts is provided in the 10-year-old judicial building.

Subcontractors on the current project are A. and B. Plumbing and Electrical Equipment Co., both Twin Falls. Richard Heindel is the architect.

Chaney, who was on the board of the county commissioners when the county built the controversial judicial building under an emergency measure, said he can see a time in the future when the existing building and new annex will expand to the north for a new county jail and sheriff's office.

hanging from the center of the ceiling on pipes. There are holes in the floor, ceiling and walls. One of the doors is blocked off and shelves and cupboards that once housed supplies are gone, leaving the contents piled about the office.

Wednesday, said the workers were able to turn hot water into the pipes. This helped some with the heating problem since there was some warmth coming from the pipes although the heating units are not yet installed.

In the new building natural oak paneling has been installed in the two new magistrate courtrooms. One of these is utilizing the 65-year-old judge's bench, in matching natural oak, which was used in the old probate courtroom. High-backed chairs from the old jury box are also being preserved and used in the new courtroom to add a touch of antique decor.

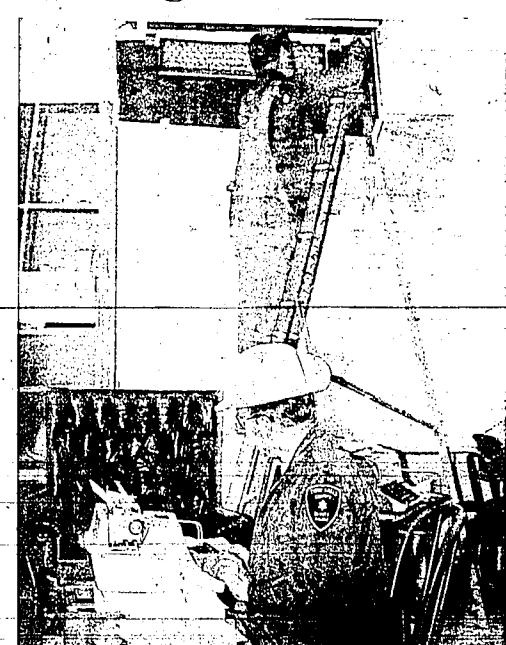

Commissioners say Idaho Construction Co., the prime contractor, will probably complete the project in February and county crews will be able to resume work in new and improved surroundings.

The judicial building annex will make it possible for all of the county judicial operation to take place in a single building. Now the traffic and small claims court under the direction of Judge Reed P. Maughan is housed in the basement of the old building.

Anadromous fish symposium slated and Game Department. The preliminary agenda for the Lewiston Fish Symposium Dec. 1 includes a symposium of government officials, researchers and sportsmen who will discuss the future of Idaho's anadromous fish runs. Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said today.

McClure said representatives of Trout Unlimited, the Nez Perce Indian Tribal Council and the Custer, Lemhi and Butte County Chambers of Commerce will speak at the gathering.

The afternoon session of the one-day symposium tentatively will bring together Col. Christopher J. Allair, district engineer with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers; Ray Oliphant, chief of the corps fish and wildlife section and Terry Holoubetz, game biologist with the Idaho Fish Biological Service, Inc. and author of the Northwest Regional Commission Analysis of the Salmon and Steelhead Runs in the Columbia River Drainage will be on hand. Wayne Olsen, manager of the Dworshak Fish Hatchery; Forrest Meurat, of Northwest Steelheaders from Madras; Ore., and Mr. Keith Stonebreaker, a Lewiston area fisherman, have been asked to participate. The evening session involves confirmed panel members who include a resource consultant from Boise, a sport shop owner in Salmon and a leader of the steelhead "fishin'" there, a representative of the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association and several local fishermen.

Recall of cherries announced by FDA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration Wednesday announced the recall of 4,800 jars of maraschino cherries colored with excessive amounts of Red No. 4, a dye used in September as a possible health hazard.

The cherries, in 16-ounce jars, are "Confidential Brand" and were distributed in the Eastern United States. The manufacturer, who is conducting the recall, is Globe Products Co., Clifton, N.J. In addition to the dye, the FDA said some of the jars were short-weighted, containing only 10 ounces despite labels reading 16.

Red No. 4 was banned from food use on Sept. 22 because of a possible "association between the color and urinary bladder polyps and atrophy of the adrenals in dogs," the FDA said at the time.

It was the second red color banned this year. Red No. 2, once the country's most widely used food dye, was banned in February because of safety questions.

PUC issues public notices

BOISE (UPI) — The Public Utilities Commission (PUC) has issued public notices to consider applications for rate increases filed by several bus lines and a motor carrier, saying it may not conduct public hearings unless it receives written protests.

Under this procedure the PUC gives those interested in the matters 20 days in which to register written protests. If none is received the commission, under this rule, may determine a public hearing is unnecessary before reaching a decision.

The national Bus Traffic Association has asked for a general increase in Idaho intrastate passenger fares of six per cent. It represents Boise-Winnemucca State, Inc., Clearwater Stage Lines, Inc., Greyhound Lines, Inc., Intermountain Transportation Company, Northwestern Stage Lines, Inc., Pacific Trailways and Sun Valley Stages, Inc.

The association also has applied for an increase in package express rates ranging from 8.5 per cent to 15.5 per cent.

Keep your Christmas tree alive

LITTLETON, Colo. (UPI) — A suburban housewife who has spent the last six years fighting to save evergreens from the woodman's axe said there is never a need to throw a Christmas tree out with the trash.

Mrs. R.M. Lembke said she everyone should do what she does — plant the tree in their yard. She uses the same tinsel and bulbs as everyone at Yuletide, but she makes sure the tree is alive, not dead.

"If anyone needs living proof (that it can be done), they can drop by our home and look at the virtual forest that we have growing," she said.

Mrs. Lembke, chairman of the environmental Provide for People organization, claims her group has saved at least 50,000 trees from a decorative but useless death at Christmas during the past half dozen years.

"Each tree is the result of some memorable occasion that just seems to happen right at Christmas time," Mrs. Lembke said. "There's a yard full of memories and a house full of growing sons who add to the fun of preservation here."

The housewife said it wasn't true that living trees cannot endure the rigors of tinsel, garlands, and Christmas lights as well as the heat from being indoors. If they are planted within 10 days and their roots are kept moist, they will survive, she said.

"We can't accept the argument that the task is too difficult and that most of the trees planted in winter time will die," she said. "If you get a dead tree, you know it's dead. But at least this way you take a chance."

"Even if only 50 per cent of the trees that are planted live that's 50 per cent more live trees than we had to start off with."

Some hints for people who buy live trees include spraying the needles as well as keeping the roots moist. She said the tree also should be left in a garage for a couple of days to get it used to the shock of moving outdoors.

The best results seem to be obtained with Douglas firs and pinon pines, she said, but other types of trees also have managed to survive the transplanting.

Mrs. Lembke said she believed in the idea of a living Christmas tree was becoming more popular every year. "It's obviously an idea whose time has come," she said. "All we have to do is mention it to people and they either latch onto the idea and say it's great and start their own tradition or they poo-hoo the idea and just forget it. We feel somewhat like modern-day Johnny Apple Seeds, what with some 50,000 plus trees saved in five years and still counting," she said.

DEAR READERS: It's Thanksgiving again. (So soon?) A few years ago I wrote a column especially for Thanksgiving. It was so well received that I was asked to repeat it, and now it's become almost a tradition. And here it is again, with a few minor changes.

On this Thanksgiving day, take a few minutes to think about what you have to be thankful for.

How's your health? Not so good? Well, thank God you've lived this long. A lot of people haven't. You're hurting? Thousands—maybe millions—are hurting more. (Have you ever visited a veterans' hospital? Or a rehabilitation clinic for crippled children?)

If you awakened this morning and were able to hear the birds sing, use your vocal chords to utter human sounds, walk to the breakfast table on two good legs and read the newspaper with two good eyes, praise the Lord! A lot of people couldn't.

How's your pocketbook? This? Well, most of the world is a lot poorer. No pensions. No welfare. No food stamps. No Social Security. In fact, one-third of the people in the world will go to bed hungry tonight.

Are you lonely? The way to have a friend is to BE one. If nobody calls you, call them. Go out of your way to do something nice for somebody. It's a must for the blues.

Are you concerned about your country's future? Hooray! Our system has been saved by such concern. Concern for law and order, concern for peace and concern for fair play under the law. Your country may not be a rose garden, but it also is not a patch of weeds.

Freedom rings! Look and listen. You can still worship at the church of your choice, cast a secret ballot and even criticize your government without fearing a knock on the head or a knock on the door at midnight! And if you want to live under a different system, you are free to go. There are no walls or fences—nothing to keep you here.

As a final thought, I'll repeat my Thanksgiving Prayer: O, heavenly Father: We thank Thee for food and remember the hungry.

We thank Thee for health, and remember the sick.

We thank Thee for friends and remember the friendless.

We thank Thee for freedom and remember the enslaved. May these remembrances stir us to service.

That Thy gifts to us may be used for others. Amen.

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving and may God bless you and yours.

Lyn Emery, Wood wed in LDS rites

JEROME — Lyn Emery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Emery, Jerome, became the bride of James W. Wood, Teton, in a formal ceremony in the Third Ward LDS Church here Nov. 12.

The bride has been residing in Rexburg. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Seth Wood, Rexburg.

Bishop William L. Hadlock performed the double flag ceremony with Ruth Brownlee as maid of honor and David Wood, brother of the bridegroom as best man.

The bride's gown was fashioned of nylon lace with a high neckline, satin ribbon trim and an empire waistline. The bodice featured ruffle trim with the skirt and train made of tiers of ruffles. She carried a colonial bouquet of yellow baby mums, orange baby roses and baby's breath tied with orange, rust and gold streamers.

Baskets of yellow and white mums and orange carnations flanked the arch of greenery entwined with roses and ribbon streamers as a background for the ceremony.

Other attendants for the couple included Jean Emery, Anita Emery, Doris Hicks, bridesmaids, and Ronda Robertson, organist. Dean Emery, brother of the bride, and Jeffery Barlow and Chris Haileck were ushers.

Theater announces upcoming programs

GOODING — Holiday productions and the spring tour were announced at a meeting of the Antique Festival Theatre trustees here Monday night.

Trustees expressed pleasure at the upcoming productions as being more interesting to the general public, according to Del Bowler, program chairman. Combined with bad weather for outdoor theatre have cut audiences in southern Idaho during the summer traveling season, trustee said.

The current tour, in which a company of 11 actors is playing "Comedy of Errors" and "The Little Foxes" on college campuses throughout the Western states, ends in early December. This same company will then rehearse "Dickens' 'Christmas Carol'" for holiday special gals in Sun Valley and Boise.

A spring tour will take a quartet of actors on the road with a produced version of Shaw's "Don Juan in Hell." This comedy satire, usually done as a reading, will get a face lifting with the state version with contemporary overtones, Bowler said.

The summer tour of a scholarship company will present a popular melodrama "The Drunkard" and Moliere's comedy "The Imaginary Invalid."

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — You were quoted as having written that yogurt has a harmful effect on people afflicted with cataracts. This is of direct personal interest to me in view of my own eye condition. Is it true? If so, are other dairy products such as cottage cheese, buttermilk and ordinary cheeses also considered harmful? — Dear Reader —

No. It isn't so. I did write that some scientists had suggested yogurt was one cause of cataracts. Their studies were based on rats eating large amounts of yogurt. Commercial yogurt and some cheeses are often thickened with nonfat dry milk powder which makes these products very high in lactose. The scientists had theorized that the high lactose content of yogurt was responsible for the cataracts in the rats.

Many things affect cataracts

I also pointed out in the column that these studies did NOT mean that yogurt causes cataracts in people. Studies in rats are not directly applicable to humans. And humans do not eat a comparable amount of yogurt used in the experiments.

Cataracts are caused by many different factors, including radiation and hereditary factors. They are more common in diabetics. There is no evidence that a person who has cataracts should not eat yogurt or cheese if he so desired.

Some cheeses cannot be eaten in large amounts if you want to stay on a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet, but otherwise, unless you have lactose intolerance with digestive symptoms from it, there is no reason you can't use these products.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-2, Milk Products Good and Bad, to provide you with more information on the lactose problem in particular. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10119.

Dear Dr. Lamb —

Is a hiatal hernia the same as a "diaphragmatic hernia"? A clinic diagnosed mine as the latter and I have never heard of the term.

Also a clinic diagnosed a lump on my neck as a sebaceous cyst while a private doctor diagnosed it as a tumor (lipoma). Are not a tumor and a cyst two different things? I am puzzled by these diagnoses.

Dear Reader —

Yes, a hiatal hernia is one type of diaphragmatic hernia. The term hernia refers to the opening in the diaphragm through which the esophagus passes to join the stomach. A hernia through the hiatus in the diaphragm then is a hiatal hernia or a diaphragmatic hernia. Some diaphragmatic hernias are in different areas of the diaphragm — as from an injury or a birth defect.

The term tumor is a general term and can be used simply to mean swelling, even from inflammation. It is more often used to mean any kind of a lump from any source.

A cyst is any sac. Even the bladder is a cyst and when a urologist looks into it he is cysto-scoping the patient. The sac or cyst is often filled with fluid or semisolid material. A sebaceous cyst is filled with sebum, the secretions of the sebaceous gland.

A lipoma is — a tumor because it is a lump. The lump in this instance is fatty tissue. They are not dangerous or injurious to your health. A sebaceous cyst and a lipoma are not the same thing.

The first contract tournament of the American Bridge League was held in Chicago in November, 1929. It was won by the Chicago team of Nils Wester, Louis Haddad, Robert Ralph and Max Cohen. Here is one of the hands that contributed to their victory, as described by Mr. Wester who sat North.

The bidding included one forcing bid — Mr. Wester's four notrump. In accordance with their system, a jump to four notrump forced to a slam and showed general strength.

Here is Mr. Wester's analysis of the bidding.

Haddad's opening bid of two hearts showed a good heart suit and side strength. Needless to say it was not forcing.

Obviously, Mr. Haddad thought he had a little more than his two-heart bid had indicated. Hence, his jump to six hearts over four notrump. This put matters squarely up to Mr. Wester. He decided that his partner, who was bidding without the ace of hearts, had the rest of the high cards in hearts plus both missing aces. So, Mr. Wester went on to seven.

He selected hearts for the final contract because he assumed that his partner held a hundred honors. In 1929 honors were counted in duplicate bidding so that seven hearts bid and made counted 230. Seven notrump would only have counted 224. Remember, in 1929 notrump scored at 35 points a trick.

Ask the Jacobys

A California reader wants to know the correct response to partner's one-club opening bid with:

♦ K x ♠ A Q x ♦ K x ♠ J x.

The correct response is one heart. Your hand also qualifies for two notrump, but it is better to bid one heart to conceal your good four-heart fit. You probably will wind up in notrump in any event.

Rapport lack cited

MOSCOW — Lynn Tomlinaga, newly elected president of the Associated Students University of Idaho, says he is concerned with the lack of communication between U I students and residents of the state.

Tomlinaga, son of Mr. and Mrs. H.W. Tomlinaga, Paul, said "In recent years, the relationship between students and the people in southern Idaho has been lax. To solve this problem I hope to have students go to the different communities and talk about some of the University services which are available to all people in Idaho."

"It seems like we've had problems with people forgetting us up here," he said.

The university has strong programs in such fields as agriculture, education and home economics to mention a few, Tomlinaga said, adding that "sometimes people forget these programs need money."

Tomlinaga, a senior crop management major, said he would also like to have the administration and students work together to prepare a long-range plan for the university's next 10 or 20 years.

"It seems like we are just going from year to year," he said, adding any such plan would have to be submitted to the Board of Regents before any action could be taken.

Tomlinaga also said he thinks there is too much duplication of effort at the state's three major institutions of higher education.

"We're splitting up our money too much. We need to channel the money into strong programs at each institution and try to eliminate some of this duplication," he said.

Gem covered wagon arrives at GF park

GLENNS FERRY — Idaho's Bicentennial covered wagon arrived at the Three Island Crossing State Park Wednesday following its 16-month, 7,000-mile trip to Valley Forge, Pa.

The wagon was one of three brought back by a Mayflower Moving Co. flatbed trailer from Valley Forge. The Utah wagon was delivered on route here. The Nevada wagon was to be delivered later.

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania provided each state with a specially designed wagon for traveling on the highways, with hard rubber tires and roller bearings in the wheels. They were given to the states for participation in the Bicentennial caravan.

The Idaho wagon joined the wagon train that started out June 8, 1975, near the Canadian border in Washington. The Idaho contingent met up with the train at the Oregon-Idaho border July 31. After Boise, the train — 14 covered wagons, 35 support vehicles, 100 men, women and children with their 75 horses and mules and 30 horseback outriders — started east.

The caravan left Idaho Aug. 24 after nearly 400 miles on highways and parts of the old Oregon Trail, and entered

Denver rolls on, tips Lakers

DENVER (UPI) — Center Dan Issel led the Denver Nuggets, balanced scoring attack to defeat the Los Angeles Lakers, 122-112, Wednesday despite a 28-point performance by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the national basketball association's top scorer and rebounder.

Issel scored 27 points and had 10 rebounds as the Nuggets, leaders of the midwest division, improved their season record to 12-3, including nine straight home court wins.

David Thompson had 25 points, including 11 in the final quarter.

Jabbar, averaging 29.7 points and 15.8 rebounds per game, was held to five rebounds, four of them in the first half. Lucius Allen scored 22 points and Cazzie Russell had 15 for the Lakers, now 8-8.

The Nuggets led most of the game but the score was tied at 103-103 with 5:36 left to play when Denver began a 19-9 scoring streak as McClain hit seven of those points.

Denver led by five points, 59-54, at halftime before a sellout crowd of 17,803.

CALIFORNIA Angels general manager Harold "Red" Patterson poses with Bobby Grich after Grich signed a multi-year contract with the Angels. You'd smile too if you had the line-up the Angels now have. Their purchase of free agents Grich, Joe Rudi and Don Baylor has made them instant favorites for next year's American League Title.

Wanta be a coach?

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — The University of Illinois Wednesday placed classified ads in the New York Times and Los Angeles Times newspapers seeking a new head football coach.

The text of the ad read:

"Coach — head football coach. Responsible for complete supervision of University of Illinois football program. Job requirements are successful experience at the major college or professional level, also, minimum of B.A. Degree. Salary open. This position will not be filled prior to Dec. 3, 1976."

"Please submit resume to Cecil N. Coleman, director of athletics, University of Illinois, 113 Assembly Hall, Champaign, Ill. 61820. 217-333-3630."

COBY Dleitch of the San Antonio Spurs graciously disproves the notion that basketball is not a contact sport as he comes down on top of Al Skinner of the New York Nets during their game Wednesday night. The Nets, led by Nate Archibald's 23 points, took a 99-91 victory over the Spurs.

Angels buy AL powerhouse

ANAHEIM (UPI) — The California Angels completed a flashy triple steal Wednesday by signing versatile infielder Bobby Grich to go along with all star outfields Joe Rudi and Don Baylor, their other acquisitions in the free agent re-entry draft.

Angels' board Chairman Gene Autry wood the former Baltimore all star infielder and Golden Glove winner away from the New York Yankees to put him in California's millionaire stable with Rudi and Baylor.

The club did not announce terms of Grich's contract, but it was certain he will be paid well over the $1 million mark on a multiple-year contract since Rudi got $2 million and Baylor $1 million on five-year contracts, according to unofficial sources.

Grich, a six-year veteran at 27, has a lifetime batting average of .262 and 50 home runs. He was an all star with Baltimore's Rochester Triple-A affiliate, twice hitting better than .300, but was switched to second base with the Orioles because Mark Belanger had already established himself at shortstop.

Grich, who attended high school just a few miles north in Long Beach, was all smiles at the Anaheim Stadium news conference to announce his signing.

When he was asked about moving to shortstop, he replied:

"I'm confident I can do the job. The last time I played a full season at short was in 1971 at Rochester and I won the Silver Glove."

"Through hard work and a lot of extra ground balls, I feel I can regain that form. My arm is strong and you don't forget. I've had the benefit of playing next to Mark Belanger for the last few years. You learn a lot working with him."

"I'm glad to come back home and be able to share the thrill of playing the big leagues with my family and close friends."

Autry was able to nab three free agents because the Angels lost three men in the draft — minor leaguers Billy Smith and Paul Dade plus fringe infielder Tim Norgrook.

There was some controversy to Grich's signing, however, because the Angels purchased Nordmoe's contract from the Orioles late in the season with full knowledge that he was playing out his option and would enter the free agent pool at season's end.

New York Yankees board chairman George Steinbrenner cautioned the Angels last week about signing a third free agent because of the loss of Norgrook, saying it would be an abuse of the re-entry draft and the matter should be brought up before both American League and baseball officials.

Grich, Rudi and Baylor were all represented in negotiations by Jerry Kapstein, who now has eight of his 10 players in the re-entry draft under contract.

The Angels finished fourth in the American League West for 1976, showing some improvement under new manager Norm Sherry who took over from Dick Williams late in the season. California has always had the pitching — starting with Nolan Ryan and Frank Tanana — and the acquisition of Rudi, Baylor and Grich finally gives the club some hitting.

"We have a chance to go into the season as the division favorite," said an elated Red Patterson, the Angels' president, after Autry landed Rudi and Baylor last week.

The Angels tentatively plan to play Rudi in left field with Bobby Bonds in right and 23-year-old Dan Briggs in center, Sherry said. Baylor will be a designated hitter and platoon with Tony Solaita at first base.

The Angels will use Jerry Remy at second base with Grich at shortstop where Orlando Ramirez performed much of the past season.

Grich, a 6'2, 180-pounder, is a native of Muskegon, Mich., who makes his offseason home in Southern California. He attended two California colleges, UCLA and Fresno State.

Grich set American League records at second base in 1973 with the highest fielding average at his position with .995 and in 1974 with most putouts, 481.

Nielsen picked QB on all-WAC team

DENVER (UPI) — Players from Brigham Young and New Mexico dominated the 1976 All-Western Athletic Conference offensive team selected by head coaches and announced Wednesday by WAC Commissioner Stan Bates.

Brigham Young, conference champion with Wyoming, and New Mexico each placed four players on the team. Arizona, Wyoming and Texas-EI Paso each placed two players on the team and Colorado State had one.

BVU quarterback Gifford Nielsen and Wyoming tackle Dennis Baker each received six votes. The only unanimous choice was CSU punting specialist Mike Deutsch and Arizona's Lee Pistor was named as place kicker.

Nielsen set five single season WAC records this year with 2,919 total yards. He completed 207 of 372 passes for 3,192 yards and 29 touchdowns. Baker was a WAC first team pick in 1975 as a sophomore.

The running backs named to the team were Mike Williams of New Mexico; Robert Elliott of Texas-EI Paso and Jeff Blanc of Brigham Young. Williams, a two-year starter with the Lobos, led the WAC in rushing with 1,073 yards with one game remaining.

Elliott rushed for 769 yards and Blanc had 589 yards. Both players were named last year to the All-WAC teams.

New Mexico's Preston Dennard and Arizona's Keith Hartwig were named as wide receivers. Dennard currently is third in the WAC with 41 catches and Hartwig leads the conference with 51 for a school record 1,102 yards.

Walter Howard of Wyoming and Brian Billie of BYU had eight end honors. Howard was Wyoming's leading receiver with 16 catches for 605 yards and Billie had 26 receptions for 338 yards.

New Mexico's Dave Green, a 6-5, 200-pound senior in his first year at the position, was named All-WAC center.

The good life of the fisherman

NEW YORK — Winter was in the air when Scotty the mallman delivered a slender book entitled "Izaak Walton, the Compleat Angler and His Turbulent Times," by J. Lawrence Pool and Angelina J. Pool with an accompanying letter from Herb Shultz, friend of the authors, brother of the Angler, baseball fan pledged to the St. Louis Cardinals, and Vassar's vice president for development. Larry Pool, Herb writes, is a man of several facets. "His real career is brain surgery and he retired a year or two ago as head of the Brain Surgery Department of Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital. He has written half a dozen books on the general topic, 'Brain Surgery Made Simple,' though the titles were not that jazzy. In the 1930s he was twice national singles squash champion. An internationally known sailor, he crossed the ocean four times 'under sail.' Raced three times in the Fastnet Race, which is sort of the Grand National of ocean racing. Life member of the British Royal Ocean Racing Club. Now that he is retired, his main pursuits are dry fly fishing for brown and rainbow trout, and honoring the memory of Izaak Walton."

Any time is a good time to read old Izaak or read about him, but the best time is a winter evening with a fire going. Then a stroll with the giddy old cool beside the Dove, the Trent or the Dee is as warming as that hairy wine he wrote about — "the good liquor that our honest forefathers did use to drink — the drink which preserved their health, and made them live long and to do so many good deeds."

Dr. Pool's pleasant little book doesn't pretend to be a full scale biography of Walton or an assessment of his literary stature. It is more concerned with the English in which he lived from 1593 to 1683, touching upon the political and religious strife of the period, the art, architecture, music, theater, medicine and plagues. The author's undisguised admiration for Izaak shows on almost every page.

Modern critics have put Walton away as a bait-sinker but Dr. Pool is pretty sure he tied flies and fished with them. When it is charged that Walton was a plagiarist who stole from earlier works like "Troyte Of fysshynge with an Angle" by Dame Julian, Berners, and William Samuel's "The Arte of Angling," Pool says he borrowed, but usually he admitted it. To those who find Walton tedious and rambling, Pool says yes, and doesn't he ramble delightfully?

Pooh rejoices in Walton's tall tales like his mention of Aristotle's merry River Eelusia, which "bubbles, dances and groves sandy" when music is played, of the biblical river that can briskly all week but rested on the sabbath, of rivers whose water could kindle a torch, turn objects to stone or color sheep white — his own expression — and any foollooking milkmaid could put a sparkle in his eye but he was a godly iron monger who advised "anglers to be patient, and forbear swearing, lest they be heard and catch no fish." He spoke so highly and so often of virtue that it's a mild surprise to discover from Dr. Pool that he stooped to graffiti: "Chaucer was apparently one of Izaak's heroes, judging from Shepherd's 1676 book which tells us that the Is. Wa. were 'cut on Chaucer's tomb in Westminster Abbey.' Izaak must have been a young man at the time, when like many a modern youth, carried his initials on a public monument. He certainly would not have done so as the mature, respected churchman he later became."

When Dr. Pool wasn't playing squash or racing sailboats or treading seafuls or writing about it, he found time to whittle a tapered birch rod such as Walton used, braid a papered line of white horse hair as prescribed by the master, fashion hooks from ordinary sewing needles heated over a charcoal fire as Dame Julian directed, tie flies on the hooks and fish with them.

"The rod," he reports, "is 11-feet long with an action that is best described as irresolute." Nevertheless, he caught trout with it in Connecticut. Reading about that recalled the late Lauton Carver and his Native Dancer fly. Walton was a newspaper stiff who turned square and opened a restaurant on Second Avenue in which he tied flies and sold Walton on the basement and practiced casting on the roof.

Noting Walton's observations about fishing with a horse hair line, he decided to go the master one better. He wrote to Ralph Karchevich, then manager of Alfred Vanderbilt's Sagamore farm where the greatest horse of his time, Native Dancer, was just starting his career in stud. Karchev sent back a handful of Grey horse hair with a sworn statement that although there were other grey horses on the farm, including a foal named Billy Sunday, these hairs had indeed been plucked from Native Dancer's stall.

Carver had a jeweler make up several dozen solid gold hooks and at Lawton's request the talented Helen Shaw designed the Native Dancer fly — cursive body with white hackle, because the Vanderbilt racing silks are cursive with white diamonds; wings and tail dark grey like the horse's coat. Because that coat was darker than Walton would recommend, Carver took the hairs of a silver rince.

Then the flies, each with a single hair for a leader, were encased in velvet-lined shadow-boxes as gifts. One went to President Eisenhower who was then in the White House, even though he was a trout fisherman known to take more fish than his limit. Vanderbilt got another and the rest went to worthy individuals like Sparce Gray Hawk.

A shadowbox sits within view of this typewriter, and Helen Shaw's handwork is a joy to see. Walton would say, as he said of a pike roasted with claret, anchovies, pickled oysters, butter and herbs, that it was "too good for any but anglers or very honest men."

Nate leads Nets

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI)

Nate Archibald's game-high 23 points and 15 assists and Jim Van Breda-Kolff's 20 points lifted the New York Nets to a 99-91 victory Wednesday night over the San Antonio Spurs.

The Nets, who usually rely on their backcourt combination of Archibald and John Williamson — their only two players averaging in double figures — were paced by Van Breda-Kolff's long outside. Shooting with 12 of his points coming in the first half.

Before a Thanksgiving Eve crowd of 6,583, the Nets assumed a 44-36 lead after two quarters, despite sloppy play.

Pistons edge 76ers

DETROIT (UPI)

Bob Lanier paced an explosive first half that proved the difference Wednesday night when the Detroit Pistons fought off the Philadelphia 76ers, 118-117, in a National Basketball Association game.

It was the Pistons' ninth victory in their last ten games and it ended a three-game by both teams.

The Nets, coming off a 17-day road trip, boosted their record to 7-10, but were unable to escape last place in the NBA's Atlantic Division. The rebounding muscle, for New York was provided by Tim Bassett who grabbed a game-high 21 rebounds.

The Spurs, who had won seven of eight coming into the game, played listlessly on both ends of the court. They scored just 13 points in the second quarter and fell behind 76-60 after three periods.

The Spurs were paced by 15 points from ex-Nets Billy Paultz and Mike Gale.

PHILADELPHIA'S Julius Erving looks ready to take off for one of his incredible leaping, above-the-rim shots. Philadelphia is going to be tough to beat this year, with both Erving and fellow super-star George McGinnis at the other forward. Wednesday night, however, the 76ers were edged by the Detroit Pistons, currently the NBA's hottest team.

The Hawks stayed close to the Pacers during the first half, but Knight and Dan Roundfield fueled a 32-point third quarter effort as Indiana took complete charge, 89-66.

Roundfield finished with 21 points for the Pacers which had six players in double figures. Tom Barker was high for Atlanta with 21.

Rockets win in O.T.

HOUSTON (UPI)

Rudy Tomjanovich scored six points in the five-minute overtime and the Houston Rockets held Rick Barry to one basket in that span to squeeze out a 113-107 victory over the Golden State Warriors Wednesday night.

Charles Johnson's tip-in with one minute remaining in regulation play tied the score 99-99 and capped a furious

Warriors' comeback from as much as a 14-point deficit.

Each team had two shots after Johnson's tying bucket but neither could connect as the Rockets were taken into their third straight overtime game.

Tomjanovich, the leading Rocket scorer with 25 points, fired in baskets of 20 and 25 feet to start Houston to an overtime lead it never gave up.

BOSTON (UPI)

Sidney Wicks scored 24 points and Tom Boswell added 18 — both season-high performances — as the Boston Celtics placed seven men in double figures Wednesday night to beat the Kansas City Kings, 133-111.

Charlie Scott also scored 18, while John Havlicek, Curtis Rowe and Jo White each added 17. Jim Arthard 10.

Ron Boone scored the game-high 28 points while Scott Wedman added 15 and Richard Washington 17 for the Kings.

Down 25-22 after the first quarter, the Celtics reeled off the first eight points of the second period and were never headed. Wicks' eight points highlighted a 20-3 Boston spurt that gave them a 42-33 lead.

Kansas City drew to within three points midway through the third quarter, but Boston outscored them 12-3 in the last three minutes of the third period to put the game away.

Murtaugh wins two

DIETRICH

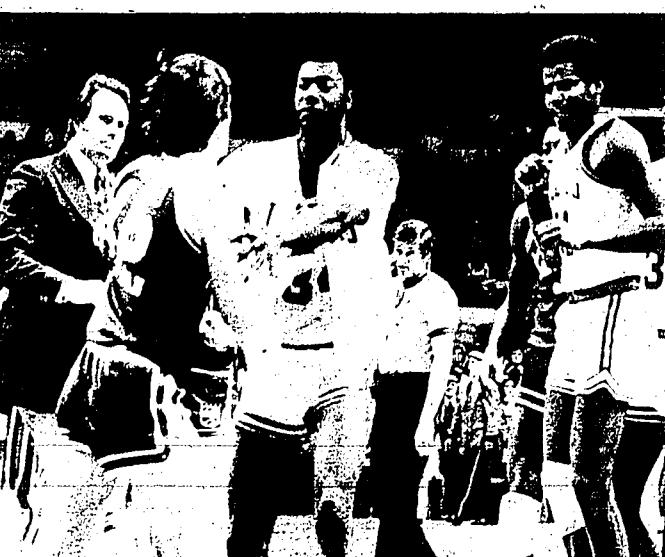

Murtaugh's Lori Bennett scored 28 points to lead her team to a 38-24 win over Dietrich Tuesday night.

The game was shortened due to injuries incurred by the Dietrich team, or Bennett might have scored more. She had 18 points at the half.

On Monday night, Murtaugh beat Bubley by a score of 27-24 and Bennett had 18 of her team's points.

Bennett is averaging 23 points a game so far this season.

KANSAS CITY's Scott Wedman tries to get at Boston's Curtis Rowe during their game Wednesday night. Fortunately for Wedman, he was restrained by the Celtic's Ard. Although Wedman appears to be ready for action, Rowe is much larger than Wedman, a guard.

Cooler heads prevail

Dorsett or Bell?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett, annoyed at not winning the Heisman Trophy last season, is the clearcut favorite to achieve that honor Tuesday when the Downtown Athletic Club announces the winner of college football's most coveted award.

The 5-foot-11, 189-pound senior running back, who has gained more yardage over his four-year career than any player in college history, is expected to be a runaway winner in the balloting of more than 1,000 sports writers and sportscasters from across the nation.

The winner will be announced at 11:30 a.m. EST Tuesday.

If Dorsett wins, he would be the first PLIT player ever to capture the Heisman Trophy and only the second Eastern player in the last 13 years to be so honored. An Easterner was last acclaimed in 1973 when John Cappelletti, a former Penn State running back now with the Los Angeles Rams, was the winner.

At the beginning of the season, the Heisman Trophy race was expected to be tightly contested between Dorsett and Southern California's talented running back, Ricky Bell. Bell, the nation's leading rusher last season, finished second in last year's balloting when Ohio State's Archie Griffin became the first player ever to win back-to-back Heisman awards.

Dorsett, however, has had a more spectacular season than Bell, who has been slowed by injuries. Through games of Nov. 25, Dorsett led the nation in rushing with a 17.2 per game average and had scored 19 touchdowns while Bell ranked third in rushing with 14.9 yards per game and had scored 14 touchdowns.

Dorsett, also, is the only player ever to rush over 1,000 yards in each of his four varsity seasons and, entering the final game of the regular season with Penn State, has already become college football's career rushing leader with 5,553 yards.

Winning the Heisman Trophy would fulfill a personal goal Dorsett set for himself this season. Last year he finished a distant fourth in the voting, which he considered "kind of shocking."

But his chances for winning the Heisman Trophy received a serious setback when he suffered injuries on successive weeks at mid-season.

"I think Tony Dorsett has no peers as a runner," says Penn coach, Johnny Majors. "He's the most outstanding runner in college football today."

Bell began the season with an impressive 17.3 yards against Missouri and went over 100 yards in each of his next four games, including an NCAA season high of 347 yards on 51 carries against Washington State.

But his chances for winning the Heisman Trophy received a serious setback when he suffered injuries on successive weeks at mid-season.

Recommendations for '77 hunting

By ROYCE WILLIAMS
Idaho Fish and Game

Attempts to scatter hunters and give some needed protection to moose are reflected in opening day recommendations the Department of Fish and Game will take to the Commission on December 7.

The commissioners will meet in Boise to set opening dates for next fall's big game hunting after hearing both the department's and the public's recommendations.

A request for a later opening date for both deer and elk hunting in Unit 25 signed the removal of this unit from that traditional block of backcountry units.

The department will recommend that 25 open for deer hunting on October 12 and for elk hunting on September 28.

"Traditionally, this unit has been managed as a backcountry area with mid-September openings and generally longer seasons," the department said, "but access and other characteristics make it more like units to the west and south that open later and have separate deer and elk seasons."

Because of a reduction in the numbers of moose in parts of Units 50 and 61 (Ashley and Island Park), the department will recommend closure of controlled hunts 360 and 361.

Deer seasons may be opening a week later in north Idaho if the Commission approves a recommendation that Units 1, 2, 3, 30, 58, 8A and 11 open on November 3.

In the past, the department said, these units opened in early November, "but got shifted back into late October when the Wednesday opening became standard."

With the October opening, a 26-day season could end before good whitetail hunting conditions develop in north Idaho, so the department is recommending the later opening.

For a common opening date, Regions 1, 2 and 3 elk hunting and split north Idaho deer and elk seasons, the department is asking for a September 28 elk opener in Units 1, 2, 3, 30, 58 and 49.

"This common opening date would not include backcountry units," the department said.

The department will ask for a September 3 opening in part of Unit 31 (Mann Creek). This early opener would help alleviate a predation problem, the department said. The remainder of the Unit 31 controlled hunt would open on September 28.

Over in Unit 50 (Copper Basin), the department is asking for a September 28 opening.

Unit 50 was a controlled hunt in 1975, then switched to a bull-only hunt in 1976. The department said enforcement and hunter congestion problems of last fall may best be solved by making this a controlled elk unit and the early opening will coincide with nearby Units 48 and 49.

Also up for possible earlier opening are four eastern Idaho units. Controlled elk hunts in Units 64 and 65 (Heise and Garns Mountain) need to open on September 28, along with Units 66 and 67 (Skyline Ridge and Swan Valley).

The department said elk populations in the four units "may be high enough to allow for some controlled take of cows in 1977."

The department said this could be done with an early season for either sex followed by a general bulls-only season opening on October 12.

Because there have been so few bears taken from a block of Magic Valley units and the bear harvest in the units is limited, the department recommends Units 46, 47, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56 and 57 close to bear hunting beginning in 1977.

While two moose hunts were closed to protect dwindling numbers of the animals, the department will ask that a new hunt be opened in the Priest River drainage.

The new controlled moose hunt would be 301-3 (Kaniksu Unit in north Idaho) and would open on September 3. The department said only a few moose could be taken during the hunt.

Morgan: Draft OK

OAKLAND (UPI) — Joe Morgan celebrated winning the National League's Most Valuable Player award for the second straight year Wednesday sitting at home relaxing and speculating on the merits of baseball's draft.

"Of course I'm happy to win the MVP," said the Cincinnati Reds' little second baseman. "Who wouldn't be happy, but it was a bigger thrill the first time. When you win it once people expect you to do it again but that's easier said than done. Still, I liked the challenge of seeing if I could win it twice."

Ernie Banks, the Chicago Cubs star of the '50s, was the award in 1958-59. He's the only other National Leaguer to win it back-to-back, and the 33-year-old Morgan, who ranked among the leaders in almost every offensive category in 1976, said that made winning this time fill him with pride.

"When I was a kid growing up around here," said Morgan, "I used to dream about being a player like Joe DiMaggio, Jackie Robinson, Yogi Berra and Ernie Banks. In my mind, they were the best and I always wanted to be the best."

"Still, I view the MVP as a team award because I'm not much without my teammates. Of course, playing on the Cincinnati Reds had a lot to do with my winning both last year and this. Really, the award could have gone both times to any one of my teammates. That's why I feel a little humble about winning it two years in a row."

As for the re-entry draft, Morgan said he agreed with Reds' management for passing it up.

"I'm glad there is an alternative for the players," Morgan said, "but I don't see where we could have helped ourselves. We lost a pitcher and we might have gone for one, but in my opinion the ones on the list this year couldn't have helped us. I don't mean to put any of them down. I simply don't think we needed the kind of pitchers being offered."

"Sure, we could have gone for Reggie Jackson. He's as fine a player as there is in baseball, but I don't think he would have been worth the price to us since we have a couple of younger players close to him."

"I like the idea of the reentry draft, though, and maybe more so now because it proved the owners were wrong. They said such a draft would help only the rich and successful

$300,000 a day in bets vanishing from tracks

CHICAGO (UPI) — Organized crime bookmakers operating through Chicago's more than 200 race track messenger betting services may be siphoning up to $300,000 a day from Chicago area race tracks, an Illinois racing board official said Wednesday.

William Masterson, board secretary, said the dirty handle had dropped from $1.4 million to $1.1 million per day since early November.

"People in law enforcement circles believe organized crime figures and bookmakers are involved," he said.

Masterson said a major investigation is under way involving the board, the Chicago police, the Cook County's state's attorney and the Illinois Bureau of Investigation.

"There could be two possible reasons for that (the drop) — that some of the money is not getting to the tracks or that people are getting tired of the long season and are running out of money," Masterson said.

As a corresponding but smaller drop — averaging about $100,000 per day — has been detected in harness racing, Masterson said. But here the experiment with racing at two tracks at the same time could have something to do with the falling revenue, he said.

Masterson said the investigation of the messenger services is looking into two problems — complaints from consumers who say they have been deceived by the services and the wider question of who the backers of these operations are.

Masterson said the board and officials of the concerned law enforcement agencies met last week to coordinate their investigation.

Pot found in Jackson's bags

MONTREAL (UPI) — Discovery of marijuana in baseball superstar Reggie Jackson's luggage has not dampened the Montreal Expos' enthusiasm for him and they're still willing to pay a king's ransom for his services.

Expos' Board Chairman Charles Bronfman played down the incident Wednesday as a "nothing thing" and said the club was still trying to sign Jackson.

Canadian customs officials found less than an ounce of marijuana in Jackson's luggage when it arrived at Montreal International Airport from Los Angeles last Friday. But federal officials said no charges would be laid against Jackson, who was not accompanying his luggage at the time.

New York Sunday night after two days of contract talks with Bronfman and Expos' President John McHale.

John is satisfied. I am satisfied, our associates are satisfied that he has absolutely no problem with any type of наркотик," Bronfman said.

Bronfman added that the incident had "no effect whatsoever" on the Expos bid to sign the outfielder, and that the club "remains willing to pay him a king's ransom to play baseball here."

Bowie Kuhn's office in New York said the baseball commission was aware of the incident and was investigating it.

Jackson, now a free agent, played out his option with the Baltimore Orioles last season. The two-time American League home run champion and former Most Valuable Player reportedly is seeking a five-year contract worth $3 million.

A federal crown prosecutor said that "no charges were brought against the player because it was only pot, not even an ounce."

He said an investigation showed that Jackson did not have control of his luggage for at least 12 hours. It arrived in Montreal after Jackson because of a mixup at Los Angeles airport.

The prosecutor said no charges were laid because of the slight possibility of a conviction, and that possession of up to two ounces of marijuana is legal in California.

US-Soviet boxing set

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The Soviet Union meets the United States Saturday in a battle of the heavyweights.

It will be the second time in boxing history two countries have assembled a field of 10 fighters each in a single division to determine the amateur heavyweight strength of the world.

The first time it happened was one year ago, when a local hotel sponsored a similar event.

The 10-round card starts at 1:00 p.m. EST and is the first of a two-city tour by the Russians. The two countries meet again in New York on Dec. 3.

"This is a heavyweight extravaganza," said Col. Don Hull of the AAU. "It's very unusual to have so many heavyweights of championship caliber from only two countries."

"Both of these countries are the biggest and most powerful in sports. This is really just the start of the road to Moscow (for the 1980 Olympics) to determine the top heavyweight and to promote friendship and the exchange of cultural values."

"Friendships between boxers are really the strongest in all the world."

The two countries are evenly matched with 10 boxers each and a substitute, but the Russian team is more experienced. Each Russian boxer has fought at least 100 bouts, while the Americans have a combined total of about 350.

"That's just the way it is. If all of our top heavyweights were to be here, we'd have Muhammad Ali, Ken Norton, George Foreman and Diane Bobick. As it is, our team includes the top guys below them."

Bronze medalist John Tate, the only American boxer on the team who competed at the Montreal Games last summer, is considered America's top amateur and a virtual winner. He is followed by Marvin Stinson and Jimmy Clark, also considered sure winners.

Hull predicts the Americans will win at least six of the bouts. Last year, it was the Russians who won six.

The Russians have Eugene Gorstkov, who like Tate is the only one on his team to see action at Montreal. He is rated along with Igor Vysotsky, Pyotr Zajev and Victor Ivanov as their country's top pupils. However, Ivanov is home recovering from an illness.

Tate, Stinson and Valio Suafoa, a hard-punching Samoan who fights out of Las Vegas, Nev., are the only American winners from 1975.

Russian winners from last year include Gorstkov, Mikhail Subbotin and Anatoli Klimanov.

US not the only country plagued by fan violence in other countries all admitted, with the exception of those in the Soviet Union, that there was some degree of violence inherent in soccer but many of them quickly pointed out that their problems were slight compared to the English.

England's rising tide of violence by players and fans in the stands has been unlike anything seen in France,

Pierre Laporte. "Incidents on the pitch are not frequent."

"We have noticed that crowd violence usually occurs when a visiting team from England is playing. We still remember

Leeds' European Cup final against Bayern Munich in 1975 and all the damage to the English fans caused at the

Prado Fences in Paris."

Laporte pointed out that so far this season there had been only one violent incident in volving fans in France. "The most serious this year occurred when Southampton played Marseille in the Cup

Winners' Cup and violence held the match-up for eight minutes."

England, however, is not the only country in which soccer violence is increasing but the

West Germany, Holland and Belgium appear minor in comparison.

Hamburg police inspector

Heribert Sanger said he now has at least 40 plainclothes detectors in with the crowd to track down hooligans.

"We concentrate on young people under the influence of alcohol," said Sanger. "This year alone we have evicted 176 drunk youngsters, 30 of them under the age of 14, from the stadium."

Soccer officials interviewed in other countries all admitted, with the exception of those in the Soviet Union, that there was some degree of violence inherent in soccer but many of them quickly pointed out that their problems were slight compared to the English.

"I don't exclude the possibility that the situation will develop in the same way it was in Britain," said Dr.

Stemmle. "Soccer means fight and is something that ends in victory, a tie or defeat. This does not only release intense feelings but also satisfies the susceptibility of modern man."

Officials in Holland disagree about whether crowd violence is increasing but agree on the source of the violence — inconsistent refereeing.

President De Stoep of FC

Amsterdam said violence was not increasing but it was just the attention the media was giving to violence that was increasing. Jan Masman,

President of FC Twente, differed.

"I believe violence is increasing but I cannot prove it with figures. I am most worried by the increasing

Masman. "Improvement" in the general level of referees would be welcome."

Minnie Blumfeld feeds Hollywood freeway's wild chickens

Freeway freedom nearing end

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Years of freedom may be coming to an end for the wild chickens of the Hollywood Freeway — but don't bet on it just yet.

The city is now committed to trapping the wily fowl who live in a 100-yard stretch of dense underbrush alongside an off-ramp.

The purpose: So Minnie Blumfeld can die in peace.

Mrs. Blumfeld is 93 and has been helping the chickens since their ancestors escaped from an overturned poultry truck and fled into the bushes.

Some say that was 7 years ago; others say more than 10 years.

Wherever it was, the first dozen escapes thrived. Their descendants now number from 40 to 50. Reverting to the wild, they grew tough, smart and elusive under survival pressures and appear to prefer freedom, scrabbling for a living beside the traffic-choked freeway, to the serenity of a henhouse, and managing to avoid capture.

The Animal Regulation Department has tried several times to catch them, but the thick brush hampers humans and the chickens are quick. Traps didn't work.

The chickens get help from some local sympathizers who dismantle the traps, the department's officers complain.

And they get help from Minnie, a widow who contributes food and water to the flock, spending about $35 a month of her small Social Security check on them.

"They're just chickens — but I do love them," she has said.

She worries, at 93, that there will be no one to help the chickens when she is gone. A year ago, Actors and Others for Animals, an animal welfare group founded by movie stars, wanted to put her mind at ease by rounding up the chickens and putting them on a farm.

The State Department of Transportation, which has jurisdiction over the land, denied permission, saying the chickens caused no traffic problems but a chicken hunt would.

The group took its case this month to the Animal Regulation Board, pleading that "something be done before Minnie passes away."

"The chickens are eating better than Minnie," said Jodie Mann, secretary of the group. "Minnie will never know peace until she is sure her chickens will be taken care of."

The board voted unanimously to send out a license again, with orders to round up the chickens to the last bird.

"That's very nice," said Minnie. "When that happens, I will be very happy."

But no one has consulted the chickens.

If past experience is any guide, the elusive fowl may have the last cluck.

Dixie leads population growth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The South, with an increase of 5.3 million persons, led the nation's regions in population growth during the first half of this decade, the Census Bureau said today.

The 1970-75 increase in the South was nearly 1-million more than the combined growth of the other three regions, officials said.

Nationally, the bureau said, the population grew by 9.8 million people during the same period.

Florida had "by far the largest gain due to net migration since 1970," the bureau said. New residents arriving from other states numbered 1.4 million during the period, making up 90 percent of the state's population increase.

By comparison, California and Texas each showed "net migrations" of 400,000.

After the South, the West recorded the largest gain, increasing its population by 3 million people. North Central and Northeast regions showed population gains of 1.1 million and 400,000, respectively, the bureau said.

About 500,000 residents moved from New York during the 1970-75 period, and 350,000 moved from Illinois, the statistics showed. Ohio, Pennsylvania and Michigan also lost more than 100,000 people apiece through what the bureau calls "outmigration."

The highest rate of resident losses, 4.6, was recorded in Rhode Island, the bureau said, but it was linked to "a drastic reduction in military population."

Rhode Island, New York and the District of Columbia were the only jurisdictions which experienced an overall population decline — migration or otherwise — during the period, and the populations of 12 other Northeastern and North Central states remained "largely static," the statistics showed.

Figures showed that during the first half of the 1950s, the South was losing about 3.5 percent of its population to residential movement. But "in less than a generation," the bureau said, that trend has been reversed completely, going from a net loss to "a very large net gain."

While noting the population increases in Florida, "it is this migration into the remaining states of the South which is the most striking phenomenon of the past five years," the bureau said, because the influx almost matched that of Florida — a traditional retirement haven.

The regions were broken down in the following fashion:

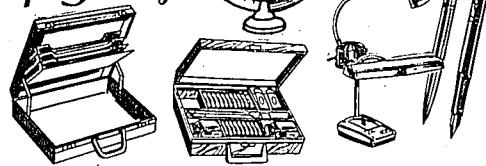

South: Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas.

Northeast: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

North Central: Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas.

West: Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, California, Alaska and Hawaii.

Consumer product safety chairman under dual fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — S. John Byington, the new chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, is under attack by both consumer forces and one of his fellow commissioners who thinks he's guilty of "government by ambush."

Within the space of a few hours Tuesday:

One of Ralph Nader's lobbyists branded as "idle" Byington's suggestion that President-elect Jimmy Carter reject the idea of an independent agency to lobby for consumers in favor of a consumer advocate within the White House.

A former Consumer Union lawyer, Nancy Chisen, accused Byington of unfairly using her name in making that same proposal to Carter.

David R. Pittle, one of five commissioners at the CPSC, said he was "stunned" by the way Byington has been making decisions without consulting his fellow commissioners, and said he would try for a policy to forbid such action.

The trouble started with a speech Byington delivered in San Francisco Tuesday saying a consumer advocate under White House control, similar to the Office of Management and Budget, "could be a powerful force and persuasive voice on behalf of the American consumer," especially if he can work with an office of public counsel within each agency.

An independent agency, as Nader and others have been seeking for years, would be premature, he said.

Byington also said he was creating such an office of public counsel at the CPSC within the next few weeks. The office would consist of a lawyer and staff to represent the "outside" — consumers or anyone else who felt they did not have a voice within the CPSC.

Pittle, in a memo to Byington and the other commissioners, said Byington first told him of his plan in a call from the airport as he was flying to the West Coast to make the speech.

"Quite frankly I was stunned by your announcement and the manner you chose to inform me," Pittle told Byington. "This entire matter, coupled with a number of your previous actions, leads me to believe that with respect to soliciting my views on important matters at the CPSC your operating philosophy is 'government by ambush.'"

Rebuild job facing GOP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Robert Dole says the Republicans, despite their election losses at all levels of government, are "still alive and kicking" and must now go out and find good candidates to rebuild from the bottom up.

In an interview after his return from a South American vacation, the defeated GOP vice presidential candidate talked about the party's future and the kind of chairman it needs to replace Mary Louise Smith, who is resigning in January.

A former Republican National Committee chairman himself, Dole said the leading candidates appear to be John Connally, Ronald Reagan, defeated Tennessee Sen. William Brock and possibly Utah Republican leader Dick Richards.

"I've been visiting around trying to make certain we have someone who wants to take the job," the Kansas senator said. "It's a full-time job with a lot of speaking. I haven't suggested anyone and don't know if I will."

"But he did say that, 'Brock could satisfy all elements' of the party.

"No one has announced for the job, but a Brock spokesman said the Tennesseean 'is interested in it.'

Neither Connally nor Reagan, despite support from some local Republicans, has publicly indicated interest.

"I don't think anybody knows who's going to be around in 1980," Dole said, but as a party "we're still alive and kicking. We just can't afford to kick each other. There are not enough of us around."

Asked about possible attempts by the conservative wing to win the chairmanship through Connally or Reagan, Dole cautioned: "I'm not certain we can afford to have any one point of view. We need a strong chairman or chairman.

"It's a full-time job, which would preclude someone in Congress. What we need is another Ray Bliss type who can sort of put everything together and build the party from the bottom up."

Bliss, the senior member of the national committee, took over as RNC chairman after the GOP's 1964 debacle.

He said the party must find new talent, especially among minorities.

Asked how, Dole said: "You go out and find black candidates and then you go to work for them and try to get them elected. I never thought you could attract blacks with all white spokesmen. The same is true in Spanish-speaking areas."

"While Carter is trying to fill up the government, we can find some good candidates," particularly at the state level.

"The first step is to go out and really find outstanding men and women who will run as Republicans. Build from the bottom up ... I don't want to exclude anyone from our party."

"I've been visiting around trying to make certain we have someone who wants to take the job," the Kansas senator said. "It's a full-time job with a lot of speaking. I haven't suggested anyone and don't know if I will."

"But he did say that, 'Brock could satisfy all elements' of the party.

"No one has announced for the job, but a Brock spokesman said the Tennesseean 'is interested in it.'

Neither Connally nor Reagan, despite support from some local Republicans, has publicly indicated interest.

"I don't think anybody knows who's going to be around in 1980," Dole said, but

Porn laws upheld

BOSTON (UPI) — The Massachusetts Supreme Court Tuesday upheld the state's obscenity laws.

The court rejected defense arguments the statutes are too vague in their definition of obscenity and of sexual conduct that cannot be depicted. The statutes were enacted by the 1974 Legislature and provide for both civil injunctions and criminal penalties for dissemination of obscene materials.

It was the first Supreme Court test of the statutes.

In his majority decision, Chief Justice Edward Hennessey wrote the statutes meet "the minimum constitutional requirements" for protecting First Amendment and equal protection rights under the state and U.S. constitutions.

The court said when it must be decided whether the dominant theme of a book, movie or other matter "goes substantially beyond customary limits of candor" judges and juries should consider the standards of "an average citizen of Massachusetts today who is not particularly susceptible or particularly insensitive."

The court upheld criminal convictions in two separate cases involving the showing of the movie "Deep Throat" in a Fitchburg theater.

L.M. Boyd

When a fellow goes around compulsively turning out the household lights, he's exercising what's known as a "petty economy." Almost everybody habitually practices at least one such. Like saving wrinkled aluminum foil. Or replacing water, faucet washers every six months. Or always coating the car downhill. Or using address labels to remail old envelopes. Or planting fishheads—which is a pretty good idea, incidentally in the rose garden. I'm compiling a list of petty economies observed among compatriots male and female. 1. The lady puts the cleaning tissue back into her purse until each corner of same has a lipstick blot on it. 2. This fellow has devised a technique for reapplying soap divers to whole cakes so they don't slip off in your hand. 3. The cook pours a little water into the nearly empty ketchup bottle to get out the last bit of it. Any others?

FILET MIGNON

Q. "When you write the plural of 'filet mignon,' do you put the 's' on 'filet' or on 'mignon'?"

A. On both. Write filets mignon. Incidentally, our language man asks, were you aware that a filet is not just a beef tenderloin, but also a headband of the sort that basketball players wear to keep the sweat out of their eyes? And a design impressed on a book cover, too?

Q. "How many newspapers are edited by women?"

A. Dailies, 62. Weeklies, 510. At last report.

If what I've just been told is true, the wild goose is a pretty smart bird. Report it carries a small stone in its beak when it flies over eagle nesting areas to prevent itself from attracting attention by honking.

LOS ANGELES

What's so fascinating about the City of Los Angeles? No putdown intended. Just curious to know why the U.S. Travel Service of the Department of Commerce gets more requests for information about L. A. than about any other city or resort nationwide. In fact, an advised those inquiries about the Southern California metropolis outnumber other travel questions by approximately seven to one.

Most of the Jewish pioneers who settled in Colonial America came from Portugal. This comes to mind because a client asks the identity of the first Jewish congregation in North America. The Shearith (Remnant) of Israel, that was. Founded at New York City in 1654.

Experiments prove that those people who tend to walk in their sleep, as you might suspect, make the best subjects for hypnotism.

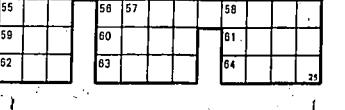

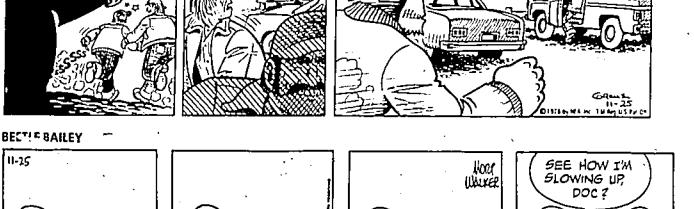

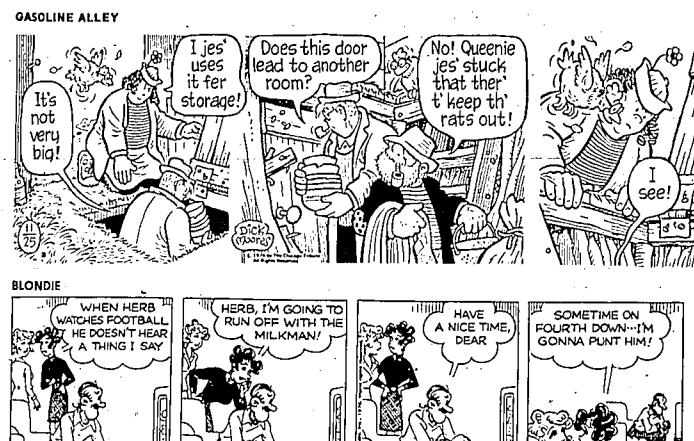

Another candidate for the "My Name Is a Poem" Club has to be Artie McCarty of Bismarck, N. D., surely.

How do you account for the fact that the average man's body temperature is slightly lower than the average woman's?

Women cited for jobs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ms. magazine said today Jimmy Carter should consider dozens of qualified women for top jobs in his administration and name Barbara Jordan attorney general, Carla Hills FBI director and Bella Abzug transportation secretary.

The feminist magazine sent Carter a list of 31 women it said are qualified for top government jobs.

It included suggestions that the President-elect appoint outgoing Rep. Patsy Mink, D-Hawaii, as Interior secretary, New York Times economic reporter Eileen Shanahan as White House press secretary, and the newspaper's Paris bureau chief, Flora Lewis, as secretary of state.

Ms. editor Gloria Steinem, noting the Georgian has made an "unprecedented commitment to include women" at all levels of his administration, mailed him an advance copy of the list which will appear in the January, 1977, issue of Ms.

She said it was designed to aid his selection process, and was not meant to be definitive — just an indication of the talent available.

Besides proposing Rep. Rep. D-Tex., an attorney general, current Housing and Urban Development secretary Carla Hills as FBI director and former Rep. Abzug, D-N.Y., as transit chief, the magazine suggested these appointments:

Treasury secretary, Massachusetts Banks Commissioner Carol Greenwald; defense secretary, Rep. Patrick J. Murphy, D-Cali.; agriculture secretary, California Agriculture Secretary Rose Elizabeth Bjrd; commerce secretary.

Julia Montgomery Walsh, vice-chairman of the board of Ferris & Co., a Washington D.C. brokerage firm; labor secretary, Odessa Komor, International vice president of the United Auto Workers.

Health, education and welfare secretary, Alice Mitchell Rhine, director of the Congressional Budget Office; housing and urban development secretary, University of Southern California professor Francine Fischer Rabinevitz; Federal Reserve Board chairperson, University of Pittsburgh economics professor Marina Von Neumann Whitman.

The magazine said Supreme Court vacancies could be filled by Columbia University law professor Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Shirley Mount Hufstetler, a judge on the 9th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals.

Move RVs on highways

By MARILYN SHUMAN
© Chicago Daily News

If you have the feeling that you're seeing more small motor homes on the road than ever before, you're right on target. Sales of the mini-motor home rose a staggering 143 percent last year and this year will show a similar increase, according to RV dealers.

The mini-motor home is a comparative newcomer to the RV field. The first were built in 1971 when two or three manufacturers actually cut the backs off Ford and Dodge vans and used them as chassis.

By 1972, the auto industry began to manufacture a "chopped-van," and Dodge added dual wheels. Dodge now makes 95 percent of the units using this type of chassis.

Chassis weight capacity increased to 8,300 pounds.

In 1973, the 9,000-pound chassis weights were used for 18- to 20-foot models, and the mini-motor home expanded to include 22- and 23-foot models on 10,000-pound chassis.

Buyers should take care not to buy a motor home with an under-rated chassis. There are no uniform standards in this respect in the industry. Since there is a several-hundred dollar difference between the various chassis weights, expect to see a larger understructure for the larger mini-home, reflected to the price ticket.)

What do you get in a typical mini? Here's what I found in a 20-foot model, selling for $11,200, which sleeps six and floor space: a four-burner gas stove and oven, dinette, bathroom with shower, ducted heat, double sink, pressurized water system and carpeting. Many options may be added, including air-conditioning, cruise-control, or an extra bunk. A large water tank, plus attachment for switching to city or camp water supply is standard on all mini-motor homes. But remember that spare tires are options, not standard equipment, when buying an RV.

A brand new concept, the "mini-Mini," is now on the market. It occupies the same price range as a converted van or a deluxe station wagon.

But the mini-minis will get between 9 and 13 miles per gallon, depending on load, speed and driver.

wheels. Some of the manufacturers' names you might look for include Mobile Traveler, El Dorado, Tolga, Champion, Concord and Titan.

One of these mini-minis, sleeping six, including heater, ice box and toilet, is priced from $8,000 to $9,500, depending on the extras you may choose to include.

Part of their attraction is that these smaller models are being bought and used as an RV, and also as a second car.

Another point in their favor is that, as motor homes, they are eligible for seven-year financing, compared to five years for an automobile.

How about mileage? The Class A motor home, and a good many trailer-towable combinations, usually get between 7 and 9 miles per gallon.

The mini-minis will get between 9 and 13 miles per gallon, depending on load, speed and driver.

'Jaws' lurks in Kansas?

NEW YORK — (UPI) — The teenage girl saw sharks coming across the plains of western Kansas "their dull grey bodies full of endless teeth."

"Sharks," she screamed. December issue of Science Digest the 17 year old girl was suffering "cinematic neuritis," a result of seeing the movie "Jaws."

Dr. James C. Bazzuto as the person who first defined the syndrome as "a traumatic shock to the ego produced by viewing a horrifying film."

The unidentified young woman was one of many victims of "Jaws," according to Bazzuto, described as an assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of Connecticut.

Revised schedule suggested to 95th

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gearing up for the new 95th Congress, a study panel has proposed a revised work schedule that attempts to dispel a long-standing description of Congress as "the Tuesday to Thursday club."

The public concept how Congress works — "in on Tuesday and out on Thursday" — in fact hasn't been true for years. As business increased, both Houses worked more days, longer hours and passed more legislation than any Congress in recent history.

A task force of the Commission on Administrative Review proposed on Monday that the House, at least, set up a five-day working schedule that would leave more time for committee hearings early in the session and more time for floor debate and votes late in the session.

The commission is a 15-member body made up of eight lawmakers and seven private sector citizens. It was created by the House this year in the wake of the Wayne Hays sex-scandal allegations to come up with proposals to not only avoid such embarrassments but also improve overall efficiency.

The task force recommendations on work scheduling will come before the full commission Dec. 1 for consideration and the final product will go to the Democratic leadership for implementation when the new Congress goes Jan. 4.

A 1974 law requires that bills authorizing programs and appropriations must be completed by committees by May 15 each year. Using that date as a key, the proposals emphasize time for committees to meet without constant interruption for debate and roll calls on the House floor.

Specifically, the proposals say that from the opening of Congress in January until May 15, the House, which traditionally meets at noon daily, would not crank up until Monday afternoon, not meet at all on Tuesday, come in after 3 p.m. on Wednesdays and then at 11 a.m. on Thursday and Friday.

From May 15 to July 4, the proposals emphasize floor action with the House meeting at noon Mondays and Tuesdays and at 10 a.m. through the rest of the week. Adjournment would be targeted for 5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 3 p.m. on Friday to give members a chance to get back to their districts over the weekend.

Wednesday would be designated as the one night in the week available for committee hearings if they are required, members able to join them with their families Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings," the task force said.

The House leadership would be compelled to specify in January dates for recesses during the year.

Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., commission chairman, said "it is essential that members of Congress have productive blocks of time to spend in their districts" and that weekends alone are not sufficient.

A deskbound congressman is as far from use to his constituents as is a deskbound executive to a modern corporation," Obey said. "The public recognizes that, and it's time that everyone in Washington does too."

Truman pressured to wait on Israel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Newly-released documents show that President Truman decided to recognize the new state of Israel in 1948 despite "unbearable pressure" and strong advice from the State Department to postpone the action.

The struggle over the question of Israeli recognition is detailed in a series of State Department documents just classified for the benefit of journalists and historians.

A February 1948 memo said that in a meeting with Secretary of State George C. Marshall, Truman agreed basically with his position of holding back recognition of the new country until it could act in concert with the United Nations.

It quoted Truman as saying: "The whole problem was being worked on actively and constructively. The basic trouble was and had been that belligerency and fanaticism constantly interfered. . . . The British were still being belligerent and American Jews were still being fanatic about it."

One memo quoted presidential advisor Clark Clifford: "The President was under unbearable pressure to recognize the Jewish state promptly." Marshall later wrote in a top secret memo, "I could not help think that the suggestions made by Clifford were wrong. . . . The transparent dodge to win a few votes would not in fact achieve this purpose."

The counsel offered by Mr. Clifford was based on domestic political considerations while the problem which confronted us was international."

Truman was about to enter the election race against Thomas Dewey.

In May, in a totally unexpected switch, Truman suddenly announced recognition of Israel. Dean Rusk, then in charge of International Organization affairs for the State Department, said the announcement caused pandemonium in the United Nations and he was sent to New York to keep the U.S. delegation to the U.N. from resigning en masse.

Rusk said he was told that Marshall's friends told Marshall he ought to resign because Truman had suddenly rejected his advice. Rusk quoted Marshall as saying, "No, gentlemen, you do not accept a post of this sort and then resign when the man who has the constitutional authority to make a decision makes one. You may resign at any time for any other reasons, but not for that one."

National Guard role 'important'

BOISE (UPI) — Maj. Gen. James Brooks, Idaho Adjutant General, said Tuesday that never before in the history of the State of Idaho has the role of the Army National Guard been as important as it is right now.

Now that the guard is being reorganized to bring membership up to a more realistic strength for Idaho, Brooks pointed out that the quality of today's guardmen is the highest it's ever been as it is now comprised primarily of professionals.

Gov. Cecil D. Andrus noted today's guardmen are vitally important to the security of the state and nation. He said if the country ever were involved in a global war, the Idaho National Guard would be the second line of defense to provide security for the state and nation.

"And in the time of disaster such as Teton, they are our first line of defense," Andrus said.

He added the guard was "vitally important" to Idaho because it could be mobilized immediately to help out with disasters.

The governor said the guard membership for high school graduates or the service veterans is today viewed as a position of prestige.

Both Andrus and Brooks said the importance of a strong and ready national guard cannot be overstated.

China may resume buying foreign technology, goods

HONG KONG (UPI) — China, signaling a significant change in economic policy, indicated that it may resume large-scale purchase of foreign technology and equipment.

Facts eloquently prove that the introduction of the necessary advanced foreign technique has helped increase China's strength in developing her economic construction self-reliantly," the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily said recently.

An article prepared by the Ministry of Light Industry said some elements in the party leadership in the past had opposed importation of foreign technology and equipment.

criticized it as "blindly worshiping things foreign" and "bewildering foreigners."

The article, published in the People's Daily and transmitted today by the official New China News Agency, singled out the widow of Mao Tse-tung, Chiang Ching, and three radical leaders purged with her last month as the main opponents of using foreign goods.

Stressing self-reliance does not mean that we advocate a "closed door" policy, but we learn from the good, learn from foreign technology and equipment," the article said.

Mao and her associates had shunned those who attempted to introduce foreign technology as leaders of a "Westernization movement" in China, the article said.

The main target of the four radicals before their purge was former Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping. He was the key man in a program that imported a large amount of complete plants and other technology and equipment a few years ago. The article appears to be a vindication of Teng on his policy.

Import of foreign technology and equipment does not mean making China "a dumping ground for foreign goods," the article said.

© Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — "The Las Vegas numbers are just unreal," says James F. Miller, a young veteran of the travel business who now is striving to do his bit to add to the fantasy. Until last year Miller and his agency, Miller Tours, specialized in handling charter trips for corporations — for example, a week in the sun for the company's top salesmen, or simply charter trips under corporate sponsorship as a fringe benefit like the sponsorship of a company bowling team.

Then last year the Civil Aeronautics Board relaxed the rules governing charter air travel. You no longer had to belong to an organization to board a charter. Single destination ground and air packages were approved, and travel restrictions were largely removed.

Miller saw a lucrative new business opening up and sat down to do some homework. That's when he focused on the dream Las Vegas numbers. Las Vegas, he claims, attracts more visitors than any other city — 9 million a year. Even though the greater part of that horde is made up of Californians who zip over to Vegas for a few hours or a weekend a number of times a year by car, plane, and bus, visitors still spend upwards of $1.5 billion a year in the gambling capital, according to Miller.

"That's more money than all the American tourists spend in all of Western Europe," Miller says. "The reason the big hotel chains have gone into Vegas is that a single hotel there will generate as much as 35 percent of the profits earned by the entire chain."

Looking further, Miller says his studies indicated that after Los Angeles and San Francisco, Chicago sends more tourists to Las Vegas than any other city. And that Vegas is the No. 1 destination for tourists traveling by air. (That doesn't count strict business travel Chicago to New York.) At some point, Miller said something like this to himself: If you're going to be in the charter business, why go through the agonies of promoting trips to such places as Tahiti or even Paris and London, involving as they do all the complexities of foreign customs, laws and languages, when there's this huge market and ready made traffic just a few hours away?

When it comes to a major vacation trip to Europe or any other part of the world, Miller says, "The vacation becomes a very emotional thing. There is so much tension. Take a husband and wife headed for Europe. The first hurdle is the flight and then they know they are going somewhere where they don't understand how things work."

In this situation, the husband is suddenly and usually projected back into his old-line role as the strong one, the master. He's supposed to have everything under control. If, for instance, there's the slightest hitch in finding the reservations at the airport counter, the wife may be standing in the background, but she's kicking her husband in the leg immediately and saying, tell them we made the reservations three months ago.

Things have worked out for James Miller about the way he hoped. Reaching the Las Vegas traveler through travel agencies, Miller puts four jets into the air every week bound for Nevada and four on the return trip. At bargain rates, the charter offers airfare and three or four nights in a Las Vegas hotel.

"We charter 707s and DC-8s" from United and TWA," he says. "We have to sell 99 percent of the seats — 170 to 180 seats — to cover overhead and 99 percent to make a profit and we're doing it. We contract with hotels and motels for rooms on a regular basis. We'll pay the MGM hotel, for instance, $7,000 a night."

"Things are still relatively cheap in Vegas but they know exactly how much gambling they can expect from our people,"

Agency said to lose $60 million per year

© Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The General Accounting Office estimates the Social Security Administration has been losing $60 million a year in its centralized welfare program, because it has inaccurate information about other government benefits being paid to its clients.

The agency's report, the first result of a series of GAO investigations launched after The Washington Star reported a serious overpayment problem in the welfare program, called the Supplemental Security Income program, states that the faulty information helped contribute to some $1 billion in erroneous welfare payments that occurred during the first two years of SSI operations.

On Jan. 1, 1976, SSI took over 100 rolls of the nation's aged, blind and disabled — people who previously were paid by state and local welfare agencies. In theory, the program's payment was to be based on a person's needs: the more other income he or she had, the lower the SSI payment.

Judging from the GAO study, quite a few people neglected to mention on their SSI applications that they also were receiving Veterans Administration or Railroad Retirement Board benefits. Comparing SSI rolls with records of the other two agencies, GAO investigators found that the payments were wrong in 69 percent of VA cases and 90 percent of Railroad Retirement cases.

If Social Security had been able to link its computerized records with those of the other two federal programs at the outset of SSI, according to the report, 25,000 SSI clients could have been removed from the rolls. The program serves about 3 million people.

Because the records hookup had been given low priority, Social Security was not able to get an accurate reading of VA benefits until last month. The connection with Railroad Retirement benefits will be achieved soon, a Social Security spokesman said, along with another linkage with Civil Service Commission records.

Soviet scientist dies

MOSCOW (UPI) — Trofim

D. Lysenko, one of the century's most controversial scientists whose theories dominated Soviet natural sciences during the rule of Josef Stalin, has died at the age of 78, the newspaper Izvestia announced Tuesday.

The newspaper carried a brief statement from the Soviet Academy of Sciences announcing that Lysenko died Saturday, but made no mention of his heretical theories, which have been denounced as quackery.

Although he was discredited after Stalin's death in 1953, Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev rehabilitated him in the early 1960s, but made no mention of his heretical theories, which have been denounced as quackery.

Porsche conducts computer study on future cars

© Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — Dr. Ferry Porsche, who helped his father develop the Volkswagen and the famed Porsche racing and sports car, is completing a computerized study into what sort of auto the future will need.

Data fed into the computer include "savings" on raw materials used, greater gas mileage, low maintenance costs, "timeless" styling, good performance and a price justifying mass production for sales in the lower middle-class range.

The project is called "Longlife Auto," and is specifically aimed at producing a longer-lived machine. When ready for the junkyard it would be sent instead to a recycling plant.

The Juncker would produce perhaps 70 per cent recycled scrap to build new "Longlife Autos," says West Germany's top automaker in a new book. "We at Porsche."

This far exceeds salvage from modern-day autos, Porsche says, and would reduce by half landscape-defacing junkyards that ecology-minded people complain about.

The carmaker's book is written in autobiographical style with the help of John Beatty, racing driver, author and writer.

Porsche joined his father, Ferdinand, in the 1930s, and has inherited many of the latter's auto design skills, and a knack of solving mechanical and production problems. The elder Porsche was called "the genius" of European auto design before World War II.

The son's book is surprisingly frank in commenting on pre-war and post-war racing and car-making personalities, including present-day foreign manufacturers. He tells also of the frustrations and real hardships of industrialists like the Porsches who were recruited to produce military hardware.

As for the car of the future, the auto-builder thinks in terms of a 20-year, footloose machine to operate a minimum of 180,000 miles.

Cost might run to 30 per cent more than today's similarly-priced product. But today's car is virtually worthless after 10 years service, even as scrap, he says.

"But salvageable parts of a 20-year-old "Longlife" might be worth the down payment on a new one."

The car would have a corrosion-resistant body; scratch-proof glass; quiet, ozone-resistant bushings; silver-plated sparkplugs; high efficiency air and oil filtration and all moving lubricated parts would be sealed. Top-quality shock absorbers, special alloy disc brakes with corrosion-proof linings, hollow parts liable to rust protected by injected foam and long-life belts three would be standard equipment.

The electrical systems of today's cars are their most vulnerable point, Porsche says. "Longlife" would have electronic ignition without contact points; be sealed against moisture; have a long-life service-free, large capacity battery and all cable connections would be in single strands or groups for simplified installation and removal. Gas use would be miserly.

The number of cylinders required still need more study. Porsche says, but a simple, accessible layout would be "essential."

Porsche doubts much buyer resistance for "Longlife Auto." He points out nearly 17 million Volkswagen Beetles were sold in 25 years. And during the same period the classic Porsche had only two basic models "very close to the timeless concept."

Hitler got the Porsches involved in the Volkswagen project to give every German who could afford one cheap transport. The famed Autobahns, built supposedly for fleets of Volkswagens, however, were really constructed for military use.

Volkswagens were quickly sidetracked for military needs once Hitler decided on war. The Porsches built tanks among other war items, so it wasn't until 1948 that the first design for a Porsche sports car came off the drafting board.

The auto-maker provides plenty of inside information for racing and sports car fans on his own and competitive machines.

Together at last

REUNITED after 26 year separation due to family split-up and adoptions were three sisters and a brother. From left are Pamela Sloat, a sister; Mrs. Lena Cadwell and Rev. Glenn Cadwell, parents of an adopted sister, Glenda Sue Peck, not present; Ruthann Cole, one of the sisters; Leonard Cole; Charles Sloat and Glenda Sloat, 7, the brother (deceased, as did Glenda Sue. (UPI).

Tears mark family's reunion

GALESBURG, Ill. (UPI) — It was all too much for Ruth Ann Cole, talking to the two sisters and a brother she hadn't seen since she was three years old.

She burst into tears.

Detective work that might have made Sherlock Holmes proud had reunited a central Illinois family which split up 26 years ago, overcoming state laws requiring the suppression of adoption information.

The investigating was done by Charles Sloat, husband of Ruth's natural sister, Pam, who lives in Vernon, Ill.

"Right after I met Pam," Sloat said, "I told her I used to work with a guy who could have been her father. He was."

That was seven years ago and Pam's father, Wayne Wilson, died a short time later. But Sloat went to Wilson's widow, who married him after his other wife had left, abandoning the children.

The widow led Sloat to several small Illinois towns and counties in search of contacts and courthouse adoption records.

Last week, Pam, 28, phoned Ruth, 29, in Galesburg, and the two arranged a tearful weekend reunion. Following newspaper accounts of their story, a woman in St. Elmo, Ill., phoned the Rev. and Mrs. Glenn Cadwell in Galesburg.

The Cadwell's adopted daughter, Glenda Sue Peck of Marshallville, Ohio, was the third sister.

The Cadwells attended the Sunday reunion, and the two sisters, their husbands and Sue's parents began thumbing through pictures marveling at how the three girls looked nearly identical. Glenda Sue phoned from Ohio, bringing more tears to Ruth Cole's eyes.

Then the phone rang again. It was the brother, James Eugene Thomas of Longview, Tex.

"We'll all be together by Christmas," Ruth said as she hung up the phone, crying again. "That's a promise," Jim said if he has to hell push his car up her!

The reunion included a conference call between Galesburg, Longview, Tex., and Marshallville, Ohio at a cost of $200.

Sue's husband, a minister, spent part of the worship service in Ohio that day telling her story.

"Sue said the whole congregation was in tears," Ruth said. "One man came up to her and gave her $20 to help pay the telephone bill."

Now the whole family is planning a reunion in person before Christmas.

"As big as our family is, we'll sure need a big central location," Ruth said with a smile.

Drought clearing river

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. (UPI) — The muddy Mississippi River really isn't so muddy this fall.

A vast Midwest drought has cut spilloff into the big river and it is causing problems for diving ducks, fingermail clams and mayflies as well as lower north of St. Louis which get their water supply from the river.

Richard Sparks, Havana, Ill., an aquatic biologist with the Illinois Natural History Survey, said the river began to clear up this summer.

"It's due to the extreme drought in the upper Mississippi basin and the lack of runoff," he said. "With no runoff, there's no soil particles going into the river."

Sparks said the water is so clear now he can see down 1½ to 2 feet in some locations and "ordinarily in a boat with an outboard motor, you can't see the propeller."

"If you took someone who had grown up in Michigan where the lakes are really clear, they still wouldn't be very impressed," Sparks said.

"Because the Mississippi still has a brownish tinge to it."

One problem is the increased algae which makes the water smell and taste funny.

"We have a large bloom of algae in the river due to the lack of rainfall and the sunshine and lack of flow," said Donald Wulf, production superintendent for the Davenport (Iowa) Water Co.

Davenport, like other towns in the Quad Cities and along the Mississippi, is treating the water with activated carbon, which absorbs odor and taste.

"When we first started to get this, we had a very musty odor and a bitter taste caused from the algae," he said. There was no danger, since algae is vegetable matter, but Wulf said the water company was inundated with calls from worried residents.

Biologist Sparks said his studies show the population of food organisms — which fish eat — is down.

"We don't know just why but it certainly seems to be associated with the drought," he said, citing lower populations of fingermail clams, mayflies, snails and aquatic worms.

The shortage of food organisms is also causing problems for diving ducks.

Dr. Frank Bellrose, a waterfowl specialist who works with Sparks at Havana, said a greatly decreased number of ducks stopped this fall to feed on the Mississippi.

Bellrose said as many as half a million ducks stop some years near Keokuk, Iowa, because of a good supply of fingermail clams. But this year, he estimated there have been only 175,000. "The smallest number we've had in many years."

"Once the runoff begins, it will get muddy again," he said.

Forecasters' skill lags

BOSTON (UPI) — Weather forecasters depend too much on computers and too little on skill and imagination, a controversial meteorologist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology said Tuesday.

"The short-range forecast has come a long way, but the skill of the forecaster hasn't improved much in the past 20 years," said Dr. Hurd C. Willett, a retired MIT professor and proponent of greater research into long-range weather prediction.

"What the computers have done is aid those less experienced forecasters by giving them information that used to take the experts 20 or 30 years, 40 or 50 hours to derive from studying and drawing the various maps," he said.

Although today's forecaster derives help from computers, Willett says meteorologists have a serious deficiency. "They lack imagination," he said.

Relying upon short-range computer-generated forecasts limits forecasters' opportunities to come up with his own predictions, Willett said.

And although the short-range forecasts have improved, Willett said, they have not improved markedly over the work of the best forecasters of 20 years ago who predicted the weather without computers.

And for forecasts three months ahead, accuracy is only slightly better than chance.

"There is definite need to study long-range climatological theories," including theories that solar activity affects long-range weather patterns, Willett said.

"If I had the funds, in three years I could really advance the study in this area," Willett said. "I know the need is there but the government's emphasis and funding are not."

Dr. Donald Gilman, chief of the Extended Forecast Center of the National Weather Service in Washington, concedes most federal funds go to short-term forecasting.

"It takes a great deal of money just in computer time to generate one monthly forecast," Gilman said. "It costs more than $100,000 in computer time alone for a long-range forecast."

Computer equipment takes so much space, Gilman said, "that the meteorologists have been crowded out of the building and we are now located in a separate building three miles away."

Connecticut gains from Army choice

© N.Y. Times Service

STRAFFORD, Conn. — The Army's choice of the Chrysler Corp. as the primary contractor for its proposed new generation of battle tanks may help fuel this hard-hit industrial state's economic recovery 18 to 24 months from now and may help assure relative prosperity for the state in the early 1980s.

That assessment was made by business leaders and state officials weighing the possible consequences of the Chrysler contract to build 110 proposed tanks. The tanks will use gas-turbine engines that are to be produced here by the Lycoming Division of the Avco Corp.

The development contract alone will bring only $40 million into the depressed Bridgeport region and will result in no new jobs, according to Avco officials. But the announcement is being taken as a hopeful sign of renewed vigor in the region, which is also experiencing a steady decline in unemployment rates, an increase in orders for machine tools and heavy capital goods and a prospect of additional major contracts for this state's defense industries.

Should the Army decide in March to order 3,312 of the Chrysler tanks instead of a West German tank that is also being considered, Avco will hire 1,800 more skilled workers late in 1978 and early in 1979, a company official said. The production contract would mean $60 million a year flowing into the state for 10 years, he added.

everything goes right, it would play a big part in setting us right again," William L. Hawkins, the executive director of the Bridgeport Chamber of Commerce, said after a luncheon with business leaders in the area. "We're encouraged by it and it's generated a lot of confidence."

"The big effect of this contract at first will be one of bolstered confidence, of course, and that's started to happen already," he said. "We have a company come in here this week that will rely on the expertise of the people here for the next five years maybe, and it was very, very confident. And there was another fellow in here who was trying to decide whether to stay in the area, move, expand or what. This was a big piece of evidence for him, a confirmation like this."

Because the state's economy is based largely on the manufacture of heavy capital goods, which — unlike consumer items — are typically ordered years in advance, the state tends to experience recessions later than other areas of the country, to feel their effects more deeply, and to recover later.

The possible 10-year tank contract — combined with the Navy's existing order for $2.6 billion in new atomic submarines being built by the General Dynamics Corp. in Groton and the possibility that Sikorsky Aircraft here may win a $2 billion contract for new troop-transport helicopters — would thus assure this defense-oriented state of freedom from recession and even relative prosperity until well into the next decade.

Small prairie town deceives the eye

© N.Y. Times Service

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Saskatchewan — A motorist passing quickly through here might remember this small prairie settlement, if at all, as only one of dozens of other small cities and towns in rural "Western Canada" — with a grain elevator by the railroad tracks as the most notable feature.

Such an impression of this particular prairie city couldn't be more wrong.

North Battleford — which figured in Canadian history as a focus of the rebellion by Indians and part-Indians led by the folk hero Louis Riel, who was captured and hanged in 1885 — is a community whose affluence and sophistication belie its unimpressive appearance.

When Mayor W. J. Clements remarked recently that "all roads lead to North Battleford" he was describing a key element in the growth of a prosperous regional business center in what had once been a small fur-trading station and northern outpost of the old Northwest Mounted Police.

The strategic junction here of five major highways and the Canadian National Railway has attracted energetic and capable people from other parts of Canada as well as many foreign countries.

The geographical location of North Battleford has expedited in this area a process described by Peter Lougheed, the premier of neighboring Alberta province, as a shift of emphasis westward in the Canadian economy. Towns that had been losing population to the cities are now seeing an influx of people engaged according to sociologists in a renewal of the pioneering spirit.

All this might have belonged to plain Battleford, on the other side of the North Saskatchewan River. If the residents there had not asked a price for their land that the railroad builders were unwilling to pay, according to local historians, Battleford wouldered to a cluster of 2,000 residents and a collection of historic buildings recalling the brief period in the last century when that town had been the capital of the Northwest Territories.

North Battleford's population now is 19,500.

The largest single employer here is a provincial mental hospital with a staff of 500. But commerce and industry also thrive. The 35 registered companies include nine trucking companies and only one taxi operator. The 10 department stores, nine farm equipment suppliers, six banks

Secret Service head will keep his job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Richard E. Kelser, head of the White House Secret Service detail, will keep his job when Jimmy Carter is sworn in as the man in charge of keeping him alive.

Earlier, Kelser dispatched three of his top aides to supervise Secret Service protection for Carter during the transition period.

Kelser and his fellow agents are civil servants, not political appointees, and thus do not lose their jobs when there is a change in the White House.

The agents enjoyed their work with Ford. The President, unlike Johnson, called them individually by name, never asked them to do such nonbodyguard chores as carrying luggage, and set a tone of friendship that included even telephoning agents at birthday parties during presidential travel.

However, the agents said their duty is to no

Cruise missile decision date set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Ford administration wants to decide before leaving office whether to move a controversial new cruise missile into full-scale engineering development, defense officials said Saturday.

Deputy Defense Secretary William Clements said meeting will include discussions of whether to build a single Navy-Air Force cruise missile, blending the current Navy version developed by General Dynamics and the Air Force version built by Boeing.

"This had nothing to do with the election," Clements said. "I set dates. I am chairman of the Defense System Acquisition Review Council, and in some circumstances I retain full control over such matters."

Industry officials have said the Pentagon initially advised them to expect a decision Jan. 27, a week after the inauguration, but issued a new advisory with the earlier date "three or four weeks ago." A defense spokesman said several dates in January were discussed but "Jan. 6 was the only one on the schedule."

The cruise missile — a brand new type of weapon — is a major sticking point in the U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Talks which recessed Saturday in Geneva until after Carter's inauguration. SALT negotiators have been unable to make any progress during the past three years.

The DSARC mentioned by Clements is the Pentagon committee that decides on procurement and production of weapons systems. The council has asked Boeing and General Dynamics to submit proposals for a cruise missile, including the cruise missile and the B-52 bomber.

"All these matters would be. It would be subject to further negotiations, including the cruise missile and the B-52 bomber."

Asked if he wanted a shutdown in the cruise missile program, Carter said: "I think it would be inappropriate to do that unilaterally."

Theater arts class stresses creativity

By NANCY KELLEHER

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "What can you do with a wall?"

Theater Arts teacher

Beverly Sturgill asked this question of her high school

Performing Arts Company. In answer her students came up

its theme.

As the production begins,

on a wall, the sole structure in

in front of the wall as first one head, then two heads pop up from behind the wall to look at him. Gradually the entire cast emerges from behind the

with a wall?" is posed to the audience.

First the question is answered literally as performers explore all the

do with a wall: walking on it, jumping over it, enclose space with it. During the course of the production, they explore more abstract themes, such as

people.

As well as being the

in the production, the wall serves as the base for many sets. During each of the mini-settions within the larger play, the wall assumes a new identity. Painted canvas scenes are placed before the wall, transforming it into everything from Noah's Ark to a barn in a tavern.

Classes are held each day for the student actors. Often they return to school in the evening to work on design, construction and painting of sets.

Subject matter decisions

school survey. Children from the first through sixth grades

in Murtaugh, Jerome, Buhl

and Twin Falls were asked to list their 3 favorite books. Over 3,000 forms were distributed.

Results showed that first graders like fairy tales. "Pippi Longstocking" was the third graders' favorite book and fourth through sixth graders preferred books that have been

was the favorite book by far in this group.

Two productions will be presented by the performing arts company this year in

Magic Valley schools.

Using the survey results as its guide, the company will

fairy tales and a burglary scene from the

"Pippi Longstocking" book into their overall wall theme

graders, the company will add to the wall concept and spoofs

of this age groups favorite TV

jokes about 'Jaws,'" adds Mrs.

Sturgill. "We'll do some spoofs on 'Jaws,' but we'll try to do something that will be good for them too."

Turkeys stolen

Mrs. Sturgill expressed some concern over the results of the survey. She was surprised to find that television and the movies affected even the children's reading selections.

"Children have lost the magic of make-believe," she claims. "That's why we're trying to bring the wall show."

The transformations that take place in the wall as scenes are changed stimulate the children's imagination, as do the abstract concepts stimulated by the wall.

Mrs. Sturgill is obviously enthusiastic about the progress of her students. They improvised on their chosen themes until they had enough material for a written script, she said.

One can see the ideas of the students, being put to use during rehearsal sessions. During a sequence in which male pirates oppose female pirates in a search for a treasure map, the men disguise themselves as women to infiltrate the female pirates' ranks. One male pirate, enrobed in a billowing green gown, boats himself onto the wall turned bar. As he sits there his legs are in his customary "unladylike" sitting position. He immediately corrects his sprawl to conform to his role as a lady pirate.

"No, Phil, sit like that," cries one of his fellow students as she watches the rehearsal. Phil goes back to his customary sprawling posture as the other players laugh. "Yeah, that's good," says the momentary director, as Phil's position once again reflects the awkward attempt of the male pirates to imitate the females.

Mrs. Sturgill, founder of the Twin Falls' Community Children's Theater, has been teaching Performing Arts Company classes since 1973. Students from all high school classes may take the course. Another course is taught at O'Leary Junior High School.

According to Mrs. Sturgill, almost $20,000 worth of contributions, time, services and costume and set loans have been brought into the Twin Falls School system. These contributions are made each year by the Community Children's Theater. This group receives matching funds in accordance with their service to the schools from grants bestowed by the Idaho Arts and Humanities Commission.

Playboy changes faces

© Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — The shareholder said he had flown to Chicago from upstate New York for the annual meeting of Playboy Enterprises Inc., and he asked new President Derek J. Daniels about his $25,000-a-year salary.

"Is it true?" the shareholder asked. "That you signed a five-year contract for $25,000-a-year, and you were paid $225,000 (in bonuses) when you signed it?" Yes, Daniels said.

When the shareholder suggested that Daniels should have waited one year to demonstrate corporate improvement before getting that kind of money, two other shareholders rallied to Daniels' defense. But Daniels didn't need it. He smiled. "I think if I had put that (your proposal) to a vote of my wife and family, it wouldn't have passed."

And Daniels added in a drawl, "I hope a year from now that here, or Los Angeles, or wherever we meet, you'll be pleased with the job that's been done."

Daniels was named by Hugh M. Hefner, Playboy chairman and founder, Sept. 8 as president and chief operating officer. "With Daniels' appointment," Hefner told the shareholders, "We've completed the realignment of our top executives."

Daniels faces a tough task in earning his salary. Although the questioning shareholder received no support for his idea, the shareholder group is looking for a return to the high-profit levels in the early 1970s. Hefner reported a record first quarter last week, and Daniels said the rest of the fiscal year looks good but he cautions against expecting huge increases.

Daniels, 47, came to the Playboy empire from Knight-Ridder Newspapers Inc., where he was vice-president of the 32-paper chain and president of its news service.

At the end of the two-hour shareholders' meeting, a reporter approached Daniels to ask some question. "I feel more at home talking to you," he joked. Daniels has been around newspaper people since his first job in 1959, which brought him $25 a week as a copyreader.

Born 47 years ago in Washington, D.C., Daniels grew up around medicine. Both parents and a brother are doctors. He went to college in North Carolina and chose the newspaper career of his grandfather, Josephus, and his uncle, Jonathan. After editing and reporting for 4½ years, he arrived in Miami in 1955 and embarked on his executive career with promotion to city editor there in 1961.

During his days in Detroit in the early 1970s, Daniels and his wife were divorced. On his second day of the Playboy job, Daniels married 22-year-old Mary Jeanette Taylor, and they've settled into a Near North side apartment from which Daniels said he wants to walk to work.

Also elected a director of Playboy's board, Daniels will be responsible for the daily operations of the company.

Playboy's annual earnings hit a peak of $11.3 million in fiscal 1973, dropped to $5.9 million in 1974 and have risen since then but stood at $2 million for the year that ended June 30.

and its stock traded at 251/3

that year on the New York

Stock Exchange. It reached a low in 1974 of 2, and it closed Friday at 51.

A defiant Hefner, who announced first quarter profits at $3.8 million, said that one year ago "the financial press had virtually written our corporate obituary." Obviously, Daniels is intended to preside over the continued resurrection.

How he'll do it won't be known for some time, but the annual meeting is an indication, he'll do things with a sense of humor.

One vice president, answering a question, said that for advertising and promoting the November issue that included the interview with President-elect Jimmy Carter, Playboy spent $150,000. Daniels added "not counting what the Republican National Committee spent."

Daniels said the November newsletter sales jumped 1.7 million, the same number of copies that Carter got by. "I'm not suggesting they elected him, but it's fun to imagine."

JFK death questioned, again

© Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency has suggested that a reported memo by the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover shedding important light on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, either did not exist or was a fake.

But the Senate Intelligence Committee insisted yesterday that the memo did exist, that it had been examined by the committee staff and that it is in the classified section of the Warren Commission vault in the National Archives.

The issue arose Tuesday when CIA Director George Bush told a group of College students leaders in Oklahoma City. "It's my information that such a memo does not exist."

Bush suggested that the memo was nonexistent or a fake.

A CIA spokesman said yesterday "To the best of our knowledge, there is no such thing (memo)."

However, a committee spokesman in the first official committee on the story, said the memo existed in the form of a letter from Hoover to the Warren Commission on June 17, 1964, seven months after the assassination.

The spokesman said Hoover's memo "contains substantially the same information" as that published in the National Enquirer in 1967.

The Enquirer article quoted Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro as saying he knew in advance that Lee Harvey Oswald had declared his intention of assassinating Kennedy.

Castro reportedly said: "It's possible I could have saved him (Kennedy). I might have been able to save him, but I didn't. I never believed the plan would be put into effect."

Castro recalled that Oswald twice went to the Cuban Embassy in Mexico City. The first time, Castro said, Oswald offered to "work for us" but did not explain in what way.

The second time, Castro said Oswald declared that he wanted to "free Cuba from American imperialism" and that "someone ought to shoot that President Kennedy ... maybe I'll try to do it."

Castro reportedly told the Enquirer: "I didn't take him seriously."

The information contained in the report letter from Hoover would normally have come from the CIA, which has exclusive jurisdiction over foreign intelligence. In any event, the FBI should immediately have shared it with the CIA, although relations between the two agencies were strained at the time.

The committee spokesman said Hoover's letter turned up during the preliminary investigation of the assassination by the original select intelligence committee.

The spokesman said the committee staff examined the letter and returned it to the Warren Commission files.

The spokesman said the letter was addressed to J. Lee Rankin staff director of the commission. But it was not mentioned in the commission's report, which concluded that Oswald acted alone. At the time, the commission had not been informed that the CIA had plotted the assassination of Castro and that he may have been aware of it.

Father searches four years; snatches son from mother

CHICAGO (UPI) — A 6-year-old boy was back home getting reacquainted with his father Tuesday after an exhaustive four-year search on four continents—that ended when he was snatched away from his mother on a quiet London street.

"It was one of those FBI, CIA, Kokakdeals in the van," said attorney Theodore R.

Sherwin.

Dr. Zygmunt Bejnarowicz, 45, a suburban Park Ridge dental surgeon, and his son, Wojciech, 6, flew to Chicago Monday night for a reunion with Bejnarowicz' parents and a sister, Elwina, who will care for the boy.

Bejnarowicz said he was "thrilled" at the result. Ten trips to England, searches on four continents, the hiring of private detectives and the expense—an estimated $30,000—were "all well worth while when he hugged me for the first time," the father said.

Wojciech's mother Margaret, 39, and Bejnarowicz, were born in Poland, spent time in England and were in the Chicago area in 1971 when Mrs. Bejnarowicz filed for separate maintenance and care for possession of their son born in July 1970.

The Cook County Circuit Court gave Mrs. Bejnarowicz temporary custody but forbade either parent to take the child out of Illinois. Sherwin said.

The mother left the country and was traced to England where later in 1971 a British High Court gave custody to Bejnarowicz who was armed with a similar court order from Cook County, Illinois. But the boy was not handed over. Instead, the mother and son disappeared.

Bejnarowicz said he hired

Whithers, an English detective, and efforts were made to trace the boy in Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Rhodesia.

Finally, detectives decided the mother must be in hiding in disguise with her parents in the Chiswick neighborhood of London.

"We purchased a large van with a very high-powered engine in it and a one-way glass," said Whithers, who accompanied father and son to Chicago.

Dr. Bejnarowicz literally lived in that vehicle for three weeks as it cruised the neighborhood near his wife's parents' house. His wife took the child out only during the early morning or late evening—in poor light. She wore a wig and false glasses and even he didn't recognize her initially."

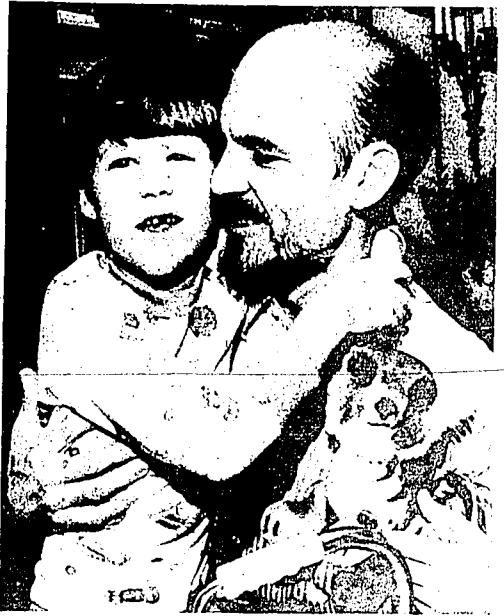

Finally, last Wednesday operatives swung into action. "We had escape vehicles, vehicles to block the road—everything," Whithers said.

Bejnarowicz, filled with emotion, almost blew the whole operation.

"His wife and child came down the street," Whithers said. "To our horror, he jumped out of the vehicle with his arms outstretched, calling his son. I suppose emotion just took over."

They managed to get away with the boy—legally—said Sherwin, noting that Illinois and British courts both had given custody to the father.

"What amazed me," Sherwin said, "is the child is very, very warm to the father."

Breast cancer treatment leans away from surgery

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Doctors reported Tuesday a trend away from traditional methods of treating breast cancer and toward a varied, individualized approach based on less "blunderbuss" surgery and more use of anticancer drugs.

Specialists hope advanced methods of treatment combined with earlier detection of breast tumors will lead to longer survival and increased cure rates among the 88,000 women who develop the disease each year in the United States.

The latest developments in the treatment of breast cancer were outlined to several hundred doctors and other health professionals attending a two-day conference sponsored by the White House, the National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society.

Doctors from several countries emphasized the swing toward less extensive, less disfiguring surgery. The standard for years in the United States has been radical mastectomy which involves removing both the breast and the underlying muscles and lymph nodes in the armpit.

"We're trying to determine what is the appropriate form of treatment for individual persons and trying to get away from this 'blunderbuss' approach," said Dr. A. P. M. Forrest of Britain's University of Edinburgh.

Dr. Bernard Fisher of the University of Pittsburgh said preliminary results from a project involving 1,700 patients in 34 American centers suggests breast removal alone is as good in controlling breast cancer as the more extensive surgery.

The mean followup time on the 1,700 cases has been three years and Fisher said more time is needed to see how long-term survival is affected.

But he said the results were promising enough to begin another trial last June to see how partial removal of the diseased breast with and without radiation treatment compares with more extensive surgery.

Such chemotherapy is a

way of destroying cancer cells missed by surgery, said Dr. Paul Carbone of the University of Wisconsin.

Treatment by one or a combination of two or three drugs has been tried with some success in patients with advanced breast cancer.

Carbone said doctors now are experimenting with such drugs

as in earlier forms of the disease.

But he emphasized the drugs themselves can be dangerous and must be used with care.

Dr. K. W. Brunner of Bern,

Switzerland, described other studies in which anticancer drugs are used with hormonal therapy in an attempt to arrest the development of breast cancer.

He said such combined treatment appears promising

Panel measures testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Select Committee's 170-member staff will include lie detector experts and "stress evaluators" to measure the truth of testimony, staff director Richard Sprague said today.

Sprague told reporters at a breakfast meeting the panel may take up to two years to complete its investigation of the killings of President John F. Kennedy in 1963 and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in 1968, and hopes to make the most definitive findings possible.

A former Philadelphia assistant district attorney who prosecuted union leader W.A. "Tony" Boyle for the 1963 killing of United Mine Workers official Joseph Yablonski, Sprague said a committee staff of 170 might sound excessive for the House panel.

But he said it was "bare bones" for separate and simultaneous investigations by two subcommittees into questions about the slayings.

Each subcommittee will have 25 professional investigators and 15 lawyers assigned to it exclusively, with a general backup staff including a documentation unit, a research group, a security staff, clerks and a special "truth and evaluation department."

The latter will include two expert operators and interpreters of polygraph apparatus—popularly known as lie detectors—and the confidentiality of their documents will be maintained.

"They are most helpful," Sprague said of the lie detection techniques. "Polygraphs, if handled by an experienced operator, are a valuable tool—even to find out what is being held back."

"There will be a lot of people not willing to submit to a polygraph," Sprague said. In this case, stress evaluators will listen to tape recordings of their testimony and be able to give "helpful information" on their veracity.

"When a person is responding and telling a falsehood," he said, "there is a stress on the vocal chords. You can run it through a machine and a good operator can find something fishy."

Sprague said a special internal security unit also will be formed to stop "leaks," preserve secrecy of the committee's going investigations and ensure government agencies that the confidentiality of their documents will be maintained.

Record Christmas business expected

© N.Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — Although retail sales have wavered in recent months, merchants across the country expect record Christmas business.

They believe the results of the 29-day holiday shopping season will top the inflation rate sufficiently to sustain the quarter's normal high point.

Most predict that the season's sales will exceed last year's level by 5 to 8 per cent.

Thus running slightly under last year's big Christmas gain.

Inflation alone is expected to yield 3 to 4 per cent increase in sales over 1975. New stores, those less than a year old — could provide 2 to 3 per cent more, and heavy seasonal promotion might deliver 1 to 2 per cent.

But there are doubts. There have been several bad months in consumer buying this year, sandwiched between good months.

Retail sales in 1976 began strongly, wavered in the spring, sagged in the summer and early fall before strengthening in October. And, most significantly November's sales pace is not uniformly running as strongly as October's.

But the year's best selling days, including several that produce double and triple normal volume, lie in the 29-day shopping period beginning Friday, when the Christmas season starts.

David C. Farrell, president of the May Department Stores Co., one of the country's largest department store chains, said in Cleveland: "I am cautiously optimistic about the Christmas retail season. The customer is in a better frame of mind and is back in the marketplace buying.

Business is moving at a better clip than 60 to 90 days ago."

However, the head of another large department store chain, who asked not to be identified, said in New York: "November will be rough. It is not running at the same strong rate as October. The season begins two days later than last year, which won't help. We think that November-December will run between 5 and 7 per cent over last year, or somewhat under last year's big Christmas gain."

The country's largest retailer, Sears Roebuck & Co., found that although the first week in November failed to show the solid pace of October.

"Because people seemed to be preoccupied with the national elections and were rather cautious" — sales picked up and "revitalized" interest in apparel became evident.

"We believe that the retail industry will have a record Christmas and Sears will, too," said James W. Button, Sears' executive vice-president for merchandising.

Paradoxically, while the research on consumer confidence shows a lack of it in the general economy, it also shows that consumers plan to be more liberal in their day-to-day buying. Perhaps it is that the average man and woman are waiting to see some signs of less unfavorable publicity.

Button is not dismayed by recent flat automobile sales. Historically, he said, it would be hard to correlate auto sales and retail sales.

In earlier months of the year when auto sales were booming, he added, consumers responded to a pent-up demand for clothes and bought well.

New auto buyers may get spare tires soon

© Chicago Daily News

It may take until Christmas for a spare tire to be in the trunk of every new car purchased during the rubber strike earlier this year.

America's auto makers say they'll try to distribute spares to their dealers as fast as the tire companies can make them, but a Ford spokesman said the company may not deliver the last spare until Christmastime.

Many cars built late in the 1976 model run or early in the 1977 model run were delivered without spare tires because the strike by the Rubber Workers of America against America's Big Four tire manufacturers had caused tire shortages.

If the car makers had shipped spares with every car, they might had had to curtail production on some vehicles instead. They sent certificates for spares to be redeemed by dealers.

Chrysler Corp. said Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. will ship spares as they are ready, and that every Chrysler car will get a Goodyear spare, regardless of what kind of tires are on the ground now. The first tires were shipped this week.

General Motors Corp. hopes to begin shipping spares by the end of next week for more than a million cars. It may take 10 months or more to deliver all the tires, said the company.

Those GM cars equipped with radial tires will get comparable radials of any brand name.

Idaho high court limits Indian hunting

BOISE (UPI) — An 1855 treaty between the United States and several Indian tribes gave the Indians continued right to hunt on "open and unclaimed land" but not on private land, Idaho's Supreme Court said Tuesday.

In a 4-1 opinion by Chief Justice Joseph McFadden, the court affirmed the conviction of Dianne C. (David) Coffee on counts of killing a deer out of season and killing a deer with the aid of artificial light.

Justices Allan G. Shepard and Robert Bakes and retired District Judge Charles Scoggin concurred in the majority opinion. Justice Charles R. Donaldson concurred in part and dissented in part.

The woman was charged with shooting two white-tail deer after the season had closed and at night with an artificial light. She acknowledged she did so but claimed that as an enrolled member of the Idaho Kootenai Indian tribe she had an aboriginal right to hunt, free from state regulation, on the land traditionally occupied by her tribe.

The Kootenai historically have been associated with the Kootenai River drainage system in northern Idaho. That tribe and others entered into the 1855 Hellgate Treaty with the United States in which land including the Kootenai tribal land was ceded to the United States.

No representatives of the tribe participated in the treaty negotiation or signed the treaty. But, in 1957, the Indian Claims Commission in deciding the tribe's claim for compensation of land taken decided the tribe's title to the land had been extinguished by the tribe.

However, he said the Indian title had been extinguished when the treaty was ratified, adding that the terms of the extinguishment were defined in the treaty.

That document provided for a continued right to hunt on "open and unclaimed land." Thus, McFadden held, the defendant had a continued right to hunt on open and unclaimed land free from state regulation.

"In this case, he said, the defendant was accused and convicted of hunting violations on private land. He said private land is not open and unclaimed and the defendant did not have the right to hunt there in violation of state law."

Hour of talk saves life

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — For an entire, nerve-wracking hour, radio talk show host Brian Lehrer kept talking on the phone about anything that came to mind — music, anything, "just general bull."

It was just enough to keep 18-year-old Matthew Joslin alive.

Shortly after Joslin hung up on Lehrer, state police found him in the backyard of his home, unconscious, a leather thong choking him around the neck. He had told Lehrer that he wouldn't be around in two weeks because "I'm commingling suicide."

The call came at 2:50, 10 minutes before WQXR-FM went off the air and after Lehrer said he'd take just one more call to end his early morning show. An hour later, Lehrer said, Joslin "said he was going to hang himself and hung up."

"I knew I had to keep talking to the guy," Lehrer said. "We talked about music and just general bull. I was trying to keep him going. I think he wanted to be helped. I wanted to get his name and town. I finally did."

With that information and the pressure of not knowing when Joslin might kill himself, local police who had been called by another listener relayed the information to troopers in Rensselaer County, who found an address for the youth in Pittstown, N.Y.

The troopers found Joslin lying in the back yard with the thong tightened around his neck. He was taken to the county mental health facility, where he was listed in good condition.

"I didn't know what I was accomplishing," Lehrer said. "I felt better once the police were on the case."

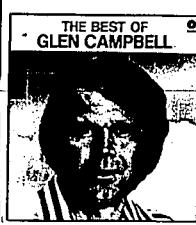

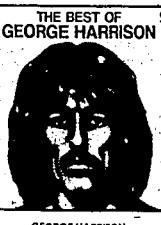

He added: "We almost didn't make it. If that listener hadn't called the police, it would be over."

The defendant contended

Safety studies cut auto deaths

BOISE (UPI) — Safety evaluations concluded on numerous highway construction projects completed by the Idaho Transportation Department between 1972-74 show they greatly reduced traffic accidents, the agency reported today.

The projects evaluated consisted of 554 miles of roadside improvements and 37 spot improvements, all of which resulted in an estimated reduction of over 500 accidents per year, the department said.

In addition to preventing accidents, the highway improvements also resulted in increased "motorists' convenience and lower maintenance costs.

The various highway improvements and their estimated contribution to accident reduction were as follows:

— Twenty-four intersection projects including signalization, channelization and sight distance improvement, resulting in an annual reduction of 56 accidents.

— Pavement improvements to 435 miles of highways, reducing accidents by 180 per year.

— Widening and shoulder improvements on 35 miles, resulting in 26 less accidents per year.

— Bridge and drainage structure improvements or replacements at 13 locations with an annual reduction of 14 accidents.

— Twenty-two miles of edge and center striping with a reduction of 52 accidents each year.

— Nine miles of new highway, cutting accidents approximately 45 per year.

— Other roadside improvements including guardrails, signing, lighting and slope modification for an estimated annual reduction of 121 accidents.

Frozen turkey futures trading starts in Chicago after hiatus

© N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — The Chicago Mercantile Exchange, the world's second largest commodity market, relaunched the Thanksgiving holiday by reintroducing trading in frozen turkey futures this Wednesday after a hiatus of 15 years.

Initially, the new turkey contract consists of 36,000 pounds of frozen ready-to-eat young birds without any basting solution added. These cuttings are frequently added by processors to make the cooked turkeys attractive.

ficials, trading will be in units of 2.5 one-hundredths of a cent a pound, with daily price fluctuation limits set at 1.5 cents a pound above or below the preceding day's close. Each limit move would thus represent $50 a contract.

Initially, there will be five delivery months each year January, March, May, August and October — to provide producers, processors and others in the trade with adequate seasonal hedging opportunities, the Mercantile Exchange's officers noted.

Frozen turkey traders will also have a more marketable range of weights in each contract. Not less than 33 per cent of each lot will consist of 16 to 20-pound birds; no more than 25 per cent will consist of 16 to 18 pounds; or 35 per cent of 20 to 22 pounds, and no more than five per cent will be 22 to 24 pound turkeys.

The new turkey contract never attracted much interest because the frozen birds required further processing, one broker in Chicago said last week. "Actually, the old contract consisted mainly of canners or low-grade birds,"

The new contract calls for dressed birds and is clearly more consumer-oriented.

News of the new turkey futures contract was welcomed by Len Walls of the National Turkey Federation, of Preston, Va., who said in a telephone interview the other day:

"Turkey growers have had a rough year, with most of them losing 10 to 13 cents a pound, because of stiff competition from broilers and other chickens as well as beef."

"Retailers have been buying beef and broilers until a few weeks ago because supplies of both were plentiful."

At the same time, turkey growers faced high processed feed costs, which represent two-thirds of their expenditures, Walls said.

As a result, 12-pound turkey hens are $10 wholesale at 47 cents a pound, compared with 60 cents a year ago, and 16 to 20-pound toms at 47 cents, up against 57 cents last year, he declared.

Overall, the nation will buy a record crop of 12 million turkeys this year, up 11.7 per cent from 1975. Last year, Americans consumed roughly 2 billion pounds for every man, woman and child.

Most of the turkey production is centered in Minnesota, California, North Carolina, Missouri and Texas, in that order.

Old commodity assumes new form on NY exchange

© N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — Another old commodity has appeared in new form on the New York Mercantile Exchange — potatoes — following the massive default on 1,080 contracts on that market last May.

Since last Monday, the New York Merc has been trading a much broader Maine potato contract for delivery in May and November of 1977. Meanwhile, the old contracts for March, April and May 1977 will be traded until they will mature.

The presence of two May 1977 deliveries has caused confusion, according to some brokers, but they concede that it is necessary for the orderly replacement of the old contract. The old May contract is traded only for liquidation of positions, however.

In essence, the new potato contract now permits delivery of any Maine crop, except cobs and warhairs, which are the terms for old-shaped varieties used mainly for processing. Previously, only

Katahdins, Katahdin-Chippewa, Kennebec and superior varieties were deliverable against contracts.

Moreover, the new contracts

now allow for delivery by truck instead of only rail, to many points other than the Barre River railroad yard in New York City.

Otherwise, the size of the contract (50,000 pounds) and all former limits and price conditions (a 1-cent move represents $5 a contract) remain.

American sugarbeet industry now in trouble, spokesman declares

NEW ORLEANS, La. — A spokesman for sugarbeet producers testified before the United States International Trade Commission that the domestic sugarbeet industry is in serious trouble.

Richard W. Blake of Washington, D.C., executive vice president of the National Sugarbeet Growers Federation, said prospects for growers of sugarbeets are bleak. Unless the present price outlook changes soon, beet growers will be receiving less than production costs for the 1976 crop which they have just finished harvesting.

Speaking for over 12,000 producers, Blake said beet growers' troubles are a combination of difficulties that were "precipitated as the result of stringent controls placed on the industry from 1971 through 1974 by the Cost of Living Council." Extremely low-beet crops in 1973 and 1974 and the demise of the country's Sugar Act help set the stage for today's depressed sugar prices, Blake said.

Turning his attention to the extremely high prices for sugar which occurred in 1974, Blake described the vault of sugar prices as "an aberration which helped no one." Those high prices created a problem in 1975 and 1976 of serious oversupply of foreign sugar in this country," Blake said. He added that the United States market is a dumping ground for homeless sugar produced in foreign countries.

Blake said he joined others who had pointed out to the Commission the need for a specific national sugar policy. "Other nations have carefully designed their respective sugar policies as an expedient insurance against volatile price fluctuations," he said.

In his testimony, Blake said growers he represents "tell me that unless there is some reasonable hope of a break-even price, a possible profit, acreage will be reduced as much as 25% from that planted in 1976."

New wheat separator may expand domestic markets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new device for separating wheat into gluten, starch, bran and germ portions could expand the domestic wheat market by about 50 million to nearly 100 million bushels annually, an official of the National Wheat Institute says.

The equipment was developed under a Wheat Institute contract by FARM-CO, a Midwest-based cooperative, at one of its plants in Hutchinson, Kan. Jim Coddington, deputy administrator of the institute, explained that American bakers add extra gluten to most of the breads they bake because the natural gluten content of most domestic wheat is not high enough to prevent "limp" loaves.

In the past, he said, domestic processors had no way to produce separated gluten for the quality needed by bakers and bakers had to import 250 million to 300 million pounds of extra gluten annually.

Coddington said the new equipment will make it possible to separate American wheat into its basic components, including gluten, pure enough for baking use. As a result, he said, there may now be a potential domestic market for 50-100 million bushels of wheat for this purpose.

The official said a domestic patent on the new equipment has been issued to the Secretary of Agriculture, making it freely available to the American processing industry. Foreign rights to the equipment were retained by

Reward out by packer

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — A meat packer, cattlemen and law enforcement officers are offering a $2,000 reward for information leading to an arrest and conviction in the Nov. 14 slaying and mutilation of a Hereford cow in a Nampa feedlot.

Deputies said the left ear and tongue were removed from the animal after it was shot in the neck with a 12-gauge shotgun. Two other animals were wounded and had to be slaughtered.

Arnour and Co., owner of the feedlot, put up $1,000 of the reward. The Idaho Cattlemen's Association put up $1,000; the Idaho Cattle Feeders Association, $300; the Canyon County Sheriff's Office, $100; and the Hoagland Fund, $100.

The payment, which covers unspecified deliveries up to Nov. 5, compares to a first payment of $23.6 million last year.

Moore

— Sugarbeet growers in Washington and Oregon received checks totaling more than $15.5 million Monday as the first payment from U and I Inc. for the 1976 crop.

The payment, which covers sugarbeets delivered up to Nov. 5, compares to a first payment of $23.6 million last year.

Richardson, Columbia Basin district manager for U and I, said the payments were based on an estimate of the sale of sugar which will be made from the beets. He noted the "present depressed condition of sugar prices and the unpredictable and volatile world sugar market."

The sugarbeet harvest in the Columbia Basin is nearly complete. Richardson said the crop was average in yield with sugar content below the five-year average.
